3-Man FCC Is Foreseen As Roosevelt Asks Revision

Wheeler, Lea Study Rewriting of Act; McNinch Rule Faces Airing in Congress

Reduction of the Federal Communications Commission, probably from seven to three men, and an overhauling of the communications act of 1934 to clarify its duties and define its policies appeared likely yesterday as the result of President Roosevelt's suggestion that Congress effect a reorganization.

The President's proposal was contained in letters to Chairman Wheeler, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, and Chairman Lea, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Today Senator Wheeler will confer with Chairman Frank R. McNinch of the FCC, and legislation to serve as a basis for Congressional hearings may be offered shortly thereafter.

Before the present commission is abolished, however, it is likely that Congressional committees will air much of its recent history and will bring to light the sharp internal dissension that has existed since McNinch took office.

One House subcommittee already has cross-examined McNinch severely regarding the FCC "purge" of last fall, it was learned. The cross-examination occurred during executive hearings on the FCC budget Monday.

Act's Revision Urged

President Roosevelt at a press conference and Senator Wheeler both emphasized the need for a rewriting of the communications act, which is only four years old, so that the new regulatory agency may have a guide to follow in such controversial issues as censorship of programs, super-power, newspaper ownership of stations, trafficking in licenses and profits from station operation and transfers.

Representative Lea said he understood a bill already has been drafted and will be sent to him and Senator Wheeler within a few days for introduction in the House and Senate. He said he had heard it provides for a three-man agency.

The Washington Post disclosed that legislation was being formed to abolish the FCC and set up a three-man agency on December 7. The story was denied then in a formal statement by Chairman McNinch.

President "Dissatisfied"

In his letter to Wheeler and Lea, the President stated he is "thoroughly dissatisfied with the present legal framework and administrative machinery of the commission.

"I have come to the definite conclusion that new legislation is necessary to effectuate a satisfactory reorganization of the commission," he continued.

Senator Wheeler, while agreeing that a reorganization is needed, expressed the opinion that the creation of a new administrative agency would necessitate new appointments.

He expressed the hope that more care would be taken in the selection of future commissioners and that appointees will be chosen for their knowledge of radio rather than political affiliations.

"Politics" Charged

The FCC "has been shot through with politics" almost since its inception, Wheeler said.

One of the most important statements of policy that Congress should make with regard to radio, the Montana Senator asserted, is to make plain its prohibition against censorship either by a governmental agency or by broadcasters themselves. At the same time he said it is unfair to make radio stations liable for libel or slander uttered over the air when they cannot control the statements of a political speaker.

Chairman McNinch said he is "wholly sympathetic with the President's proposal" and that he had recommended the reorganization of the commission to Mr. Roosevelt some time ago.

Russian, American Discover a Comet On Same Night

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 24 (AP).—A Russian scientist in Central Asia and an American amateur astronomer in Ohio found, independently, a new comet the night of January 19, Harvard College observatory announced today.

The discoverers were Leslie C. Peltier, of Delphos, Ohio, and Prof. Kozik of the Tashkent Astronomical Observatory.

In consequence, the new comet is being called the Kozik Peltier comet, for both its discoverers.

Corcoran Reported 'Lining Up' New York

Offers 1941 Mayoralty to Tammany For Supporting 3d Term or Roosevelt Choice as Successor, Leader Says

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 24.—Thomas G. Corcoran, presidential adviser, is trying to line up the New York delegation to the Democratic national convention in 1940 for a third term for Roosevelt or any New Dealer the President names, it was learned today.

Corcoran has conferred with local Democratic assembly district leaders and office holders, according to prominent Democrats here, and has informed them he may move to New York City so as to devote more time to the State political situation.

An outstanding Tammany district leader said Corcoran promised that if Tammany joined the movement it could name the Democratic candidate for mayor in 1941. Others said Corcoran promised there would be considerable Federal patronage for those who went along with the movement now, and some of these leaders are looking forward to jobs for their followers in the United States Attorney offices of the southern and Eastern districts of New York.

The Corcoran program is said to call for wholesale enrollment of American labor party members as Democrats this fall so they may later vote in the Democratic Presidential primary. New Deal chiefs believe they thus could capture a majority of New York's 46 delegates with but little help from the regular Democratic organizations.

Local Democrats said Corcoran is friendly with the O'Connell brothers, lords of the Albany Democratic organization, and with other up-State Democratic leaders, and that with their aid, the New Deal could control a majority of the delegates north of the Bronx.

Adams Charges 'Mistake' in WPA Estimate

Declares Harrington Error 'Obvious,' as Senate Fight Opens

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate Appropriations committee carried its fight for a $725,000,000 WPA appropriation to the floor of the Senate yesterday with a warning that Congress must "count the cost of excess spending" and charges of discrepancies in WPA relief estimates.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the subcommittee that ratified the $156,000,000 House cut in Administration estimates, and Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, author of the committee plan to meet the heavy winter relief burden, appealed to the Senate to sustain the committee slash.

Adams charged Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA Administrator, overestimated WPA relief costs by "mistake," and Byrnes backed up his statement. Administration forces, led by Senate Majority Leader Barkley, rallied to Harrington's defense preparatory to a floor move to restore the full $875,000,000 asked by the President.

Both sides were maneuvering for advantage in submitting amendments as the Senate stopped work for the day. Committee proposals normally take precedence over amendments from the floor, but Administration leaders were urging an initial vote on restoration of the $150,000,000 cut.

The show-down test of the economy move will come on the bid for an increase. The division is close, but committee spokesmen

Man's Crash Death Told Wife Only After Baby Is Born

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 24 (AP).—Fate hid the death of Henry E. Harper, 21, from his wife until after their child was born.

The body of the young truck driver was found yesterday in the wreckage of his truck on a West Virginia mountainside, 11 days after he had left his father-in-law's home, near Rawley Springs, Va., to visit his expectant wife, who was staying with her mother near Franklin, W. Va.

A searching party found the battered truck 80 feet down a mountainside from Route 33.

Blood 'Bank' Bridge Parties Widely Supported by Clubs

Leading bridge organizations of the Nation's Capital, Washington clubs, local apartment house groups and the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce yesterday swung behind plans for a city-wide card party on St. Valentine's Day for the benefit of a permanent blood and serum "bank" at Children's Hospital.

Such a "bank"—which would remove delays often fatal when a transfusion is needed, which would make possible the storage of the health-giving and life-saving sera that have been developed for use in cases of pneumonia, diphtheria, tetanus and various types of streptococcus infections—will pay back real dividends in this community annually in improved health and saved lives among Washington children.

The party is being held under the sponsorship of The Washington Post and Station WJSV.

The Federal Bridge League will sponsor a party at the Wardman Park Hotel the evening of February 14, and to accommodate the overflow of Government bridge players, scores of smaller parties in private homes will be under way.

The Washington Bridge League's party will be held at the Shoreham Hotel, February 15. Other bridge "fans" of the District are planning parties in private homes and special affairs will be given at the weekly duplicate games conducted by Mrs. Eugene Nolan, Mrs. D. E. Stephan, Mrs. Charles W. Boyce, Miss Maxie Bowie and others.

Plans were also completed for apartment house groups at

C. I. O. to Fight Martin in Auto Union Split

Throws Support Behind Thomas Faction in Coming Elections

By the United Press.

The C. I. O. last night threw its full support behind enemies of Homer Martin in the United Automobile Workers Union and announced it no longer recognizes Martin as the union's head.

C. I. O. Vice Presidents Sidney Hillman and Philip Murray said the parent organization, headed by John L. Lewis, "is giving complete support and recognition" to the executive board composed of 15 members suspended by Martin and to R. J. Thomas, named acting president.

"Dual unionism and arrogant defiance of the constitution of a labor union, with which Mr. Martin has definitely identified himself, cannot be tolerated," the Hillman-Murray statement said. "His activities can only lend strength to the reactionary employers."

C. I. O. support was expected to be an important factor in the coming campaign. The opposing factions have called separate conventions to elect new officers and change the union's constitution. Martin's group meets at Detroit March 4 and his foes at Cleveland March 20.

Martin's suspension of the 15 board members was termed "in direct and flagrant violation of the constitution of the U. A. W. A."

Martin "illegally took over the headquarters of the international organization," they added.

Although Martin suspended only 15 of the 24 executive board members, three other members not suspended have joined the anti-Martin group. Charles Madden, Pontiac, Mich., board member, has not declared himself.

Ford Agreement Perilled

Detroit, Jan. 24 (AP).—Harry H. Bennett, personnel director of the Ford Motor Co., tonight indicated the flare-up between Homer Martin and the United Automobile Workers, executive board had harmed possibilities of a Ford-U. A. W. relationship.

Bennett said he had offered Martin "a list of all the employes of the Ford Co., and told him to go ahead and organize them if he could."

"I thought that there should be no fanfare about this," Bennett said, "but since the plan has been upset as a result of the action of the board members Martin has suspended, I think the story should be told."

Miss Perkins Asks Hearing On Charges

House Sits in Silence As Thomas Demands Her Impeachment in Bridges Controversy

A formal demand for impeachment of Secretary of Labor Perkins made in the House yesterday by Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, brought from Miss Perkins a request for "an immediate hearing."

The resolution, aimed not only at Miss Perkins but also at James L. Houghteling, Immigration Commissioner, and Gerard D. Reilly, Department of Labor solicitor, accused them of "high crimes and misdemeanors" in failing to continue deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO leader.

Welcomes Resolution

"I welcome the introduction of the resolution and shall ask for an immediate hearing . . . so that the Congress, and through it the American public, may be fully acquainted with the true facts," Secretary Perkins declared.

The Thomas resolution was turned over to the House Judiciary Committee. Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, the chairman, said the first meeting of the committee will be held this morning and that "we will go right into the matter."

House Sits in Silence

The House sat in unusual silence as the clerk read the measure, which marked the first attempt to impeach a Cabinet officer since 1876, when Secretary of War Belknap was absolved of accepting bribes.

Back of the action is the long-standing dispute over the Bridges case between Miss Perkins and the House Committee on Un-American Activities, of which Thomas is a member.

Thomas cited testimony before the committee that Bridges was an alien and a Communist and contended that the Communist Party advocates overthrow of the Government by force and violence.

Federal law provides, he contended, that any alien who is a member of such an organization must be deported.

"Stands on Contention"

Miss Perkins in a statement prepared for her press conference reiterated the Department of Labor's contention that the case of Joseph Strecker—now pending in the Supreme Court—involves the question of whether an alien member of the Communist Party is deportable on a charge of "membership in an organization advocating the overthrow of the United States Government by force and violence."

Neither the Bridges case nor any other involving the same charge has been dropped, she declared, asserting that "prompt future action awaits only the clearing up of a conflict of decisions among the Circuit Courts of Appeal by the pending Supreme Court decision."

200,000 Got Jobs In December, Miss Perkins Says

Secretary of Labor Perkins reported yesterday an increase of approximately 200,000 in employment in non-agricultural industries during December.

In a statement the Secretary said the most significant features of the gain were "the continued increase in factory employment, which normally declines at this season, and an unusually large expansion in retail trade."

Workmen to Move General Thomas' Statue Today

Workmen today will move the statue of Maj. Gen. George H. Thomas to a new resting place—but only temporarily.

Engineers in charge of building the Thomas Circle underpass, which necessitates the move, believe it will be four months before the replica of the noted Virginian astride his bronze horse will again occupy the center of the circle.

Ohioan Asks $500 Fines To Bar Nudist Camps

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—The Ohio House of Representatives was asked today to prohibit anyone from running around naked in front of two or more persons of the opposite sex.

A bill introduced by Representative L. F. Kellar, (Republican), of Delaware, scene of nudist trouble last summer, would brand such conduct as "indecent exposure" and provide for $500 fines.

Dr. Garman Named GHA President

Election Termed Plan To De-Emphasize HOLC; Dr. Selders Quits Clinic Post

Dr. Cameron C. Garman, assistant deputy commissioner of the Farm Credit Administration, has been elected president of Group Health Association as part of a plan to de-emphasize the Home Owners Loan Corporation in G. H. A. affairs, The Washington Post learned last night.

Disclosure of the young executive's election—Dr. Garman is less than 11 years out of college—coincided with the announcement of Dr. Raymond E. Selders' resignation as medical director of the association's clinic for Federal employes.

Dr. Garman, who succeeds W. C. Kirkpatrick, of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, becomes the third president of G. H. A. since its launching in November, 1937.

Dr. Garman declined to comment last night as to what his policies will be on such controversial issues facing G. H. A. as the exclusion of staff doctors from all Washington hospitals save one and the conflict with the District Medical Society and American Medical Association.

Officers Elected

"I am interested in achieving unity of thought and action in the organization," he asserted.

When the new board of trustees, chosen by the membership January 17, met last Friday night to elect officers, not only was a non-HOLC man named president, but a new vice president and secretary were selected from other ranks.

Their names made public for the first time today are, respectively, R. F. Hendrickson, personnel director of the Department of Agriculture, and A. C. Edwards, Civil Service Commission.

C. K. Berlin, who previously served as secretary-treasurer, will continue as treasurer, and Mrs. Evelyn Evans, a Farm Credit Administration employe, was elected assistant secretary.

Membership Distributed

Heretofore HOLC people have predominated among the trustees and officials of Group Health Association inasmuch as the enterprise originally was launched to serve employes of that New Deal agency, which advanced $40,000 to get the clinic under way. Its original membership consisted of approximately 1,000 HOLC workers.

Today, however, the membership of approximately 2,200 is distributed over 43 Federal departments, bureaus and independent agencies. The Agriculture Department is now the largest unit in G. H. A., with the Social Security Board and HOLC next. Fourth largest unit is Farm Credit Administration, with about 125.

By advancing $40,000 to start G. H. A., the Home Owners Loan Corporation got itself in hot water with several members of Congress whose attention was called to the "loan"

Father Braves Flames to Save Two Children

A 32-year-old father rushed into his blazing home late yesterday near Fairfax, Va., threw his two small children to safety from a second-story window and jumped after them seconds before flames enveloped the house and the roof collapsed.

Roland, 4, and Marilyn, 2, children of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford N. Sandretsky, were taking an afternoon nap at 4:30 p. m. in a second-story room.

Sandretsky was chopping wood in the rear of his home when he heard the children's cries.

Horrified, he dashed through the flames, which were beginning to make rapid headway, to the upper floor of the six-room frame dwelling.

Blinded and coughing, he felt his way to the terror-stricken youngsters and seized one of them by the leg—he said he could not tell whether he had Marilyn or Ronald. He kicked out a side window and dropped the youngster to the ground and rapidly followed suit with the second child.

"I had hardly jumped and regained my breath before the house was a mass of flames," the father said.

Storm Warnings Up Along Atlantic Coast

The Weather Bureau warned last night that an extensive disturbance over the northeastern States was moving Eastward and would cause West and Northwest winds which probably would reach gale force by morning. Storm warnings were ordered from Cape Hattreas to New York.

Franco's Troops Enter Blazing Barcelona; Anarchists Bar Streets

Map of Exodus From Barcelona

Civilians and even government officials were reported fleeing to the north as insurgents entered Barcelona. Inset is Gen. Miaja, "savior" of Madrid, who was preparing to fly to Barcelona to lead its defenders.

Insurgents Say City Will Be Their Capital Today; Thousands Flee

By the United Press.

Perpignan, France, Jan. 24.—Gen. Franco's insurgents tonight marched into the streets of Barcelona, his Lerida field base announced, but delayed triumphal occupation of the doomed loyalist capital until daylight.

The city was lighted only by fires set by insurgent artillery blasting the port district. Catalan syndicalists and anarchists, realizing they will face firing squads if captured, mobilized for a last stand in the barricaded boulevards, Barcelona dispatches said. The insurgents also feared mined streets.

Moors Storm In

Franco's Lerida base announced shortly before midnight that Moors under Gen. Yague had stormed into the city from the south after capturing the suburbs of Hospitalet and Casa Antunez as well as Prat de Llobregat Airport.

White flags flew from the housetops of Hospitalet and Casa Antunez as Yague's Moors drove through them and across the delta of the Llobregat River against "virtually no resistance," insurgent dispatches said.

Within 24 hours, the insurgents proclaimed, Barcelona will be the temporary capital of insurgent Spain. Arrangements were complete for transfer of the ministries from Burgos.

Hundreds of trucks will bring foodstuffs for the city's 2,000,000 famished people, they declared.

Planes Drop Leaflets

Swarms of insurgent planes circled the city dropping leaflets saying "all those who are not criminals have nothing to fear—food is arriving for you."

[There were reports that Gen. Jose Miaja, "savior of Madrid," was preparing to fly from Valencia to direct the defense of Barcelona, the Associated Press said.

[Within Barcelona, border advices indicated, the calm of the refugee-choked city was beginning to break.

[Franco's southern wing was expected to halt just within the edge of the city until other columns could sweep across the coastal plains to the north and cut off the city completely.

Trains to France Stop

[The reports said all trains to the French border had stopped running, and the government's flight had started a mass trek of women, children and old men on foot. Roads to the north were choked with traffic that forced the refugees off the highways. All vehicles had been seized by the government.

[Information reaching the French frontier indicated the city's hundreds of thousands faced a famine, and that a serious shortage of ammunition explained the lack of resistance.

[Almost continuous air raids were reported to have taken a three-day toll of nearly 500 lives.—Editor's note.]

Insurgent aviators reported that "tens of thousands" of men, women and children appeared to be fleeing from the city.

Bombers Make 16 Raids

Bombing planes raided Barcelona 16 times in the day with a toll of at least 100 lives.

Gerona, a town of 25,000 which may become the seat of loyalist resistance in Gerona Province and the northern part of Barcelona Province, had been overrun by 20,000 refugees by midafternoon.

Although the Moors were in the vanguard of the smashing drive into Barcelona, it was indicated that Gen. Juan Solchaga's Navar-

Army Program In Congress Equips Million

Provides Modern Arms For Whole Force, War Department Reveals

Full fighting equipment for an army of 1,000,000 will be either on hand or readily procurable upon completion of the defense program now before Congress, the War Department said yesterday.

Clearing up testimony before a House committee, the department said that the program asked by the President will provide all necessary materiel for the Regular Army and National Guard to go into immediate action in the event of war, and in addition will supply the weapons and other military supplies not available in the open market or easily manufactured for the 1,000,000-man army to be recruited after war starts. This is the force deemed necessary for the defense of the United States and its continental possessions, officials said.

Congressional consideration of naval phases of the $552,000,000 arms program is scheduled today before the House Naval Committee, with Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, as the first witness. The committee takes up the controversial measure to establish air bases at Guam and 11 other points in the Atlantic and Pacific.

A committee fight over the development of Guam was forecast yesterday in a preliminary meeting of the Naval Committee when Representative Church (Republican), of Illinois, demanded suspension of a committee rule limiting each member to 10 minutes' questioning of each witness. Labeling it a "gag" rule, he charged Chairman Vinson planned to railroad the bill through the committee in a week. Vinson then promised that full and impar-

U. S. Weighing Right to Lift Spain Embargo

President Reveals Inquiry but No Intention to Act

President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday that Government lawyers for some time have been studying the question of his legal right to lift the embargo on arms to Spain. His statement, in reply to questions, came after publication yesterday of the appeal by former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson that the embargo be lifted.

However, neither the President nor the State Department, to which he referred press conference questioners, indicated any intention to lift the embargo, which admittedly would be in the interest of the loyalist forces.

Out of the questioning, also, came a defense of the Nation's foreign policy, prompted by a question whether the embargo was in line with traditional American policy.

Mr. Roosevelt declared that while it is impossible to lay down a hard-and-fast foreign policy to meet every possible situation in the future, this country's course of procedure, far from being flexible, has become well established and definite in its development since 1776. He said he had read an article in which a firmer cover-all policy had been urged, but said no one but a columnist could write down all the phases of the country's policy as it has developed.

An hour later Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, was on the air broadcasting the charge that "the United States is today without a declared or defined foreign policy." He declared that "our foreign policy today is what the President may permit it to be. Our policy tomorrow may be contrary to that of

Pilot Dives 600 M.P.H. in Plane; Feels No Ill Effects After Test

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, Jan. 24.—A speed of nearly 600 miles an hour—"the fastest man has ever traveled"—has been attained by a Curtiss Hawk 75A pursuit plane in a "free-power" dive, it was announced today.

The mark, which "substantially exceeded all known speed records," was established yesterday while the ship was undergoing acceptance tests for the French government, which has ordered 100 of the planes, said officials of the Curtiss Aeroplane Division of Curtiss Wright Corporation.

The tests were made by H. Lloyd Child, chief test pilot of the Buffalo Curtiss plant, who said he "felt no ill effects."

National Aeronautic Association officials said that no Federation Aeronautique Internationale records "even approach this speed."

The speed of the dive was so great that the marker on the recording airspeed indicator exceeded the instrument's range of 575 m. p. h. and moved off the paper on which the graph of the dive was recorded.

Aviation experts estimated the speed may even have exceeded 600 miles per hour, compared with the normal falling rate for a 170-pound man of 150 miles per hour.

The Hawk 75A is an adaptation of the United States Army pursuit ship P36 which has been in use almost a year. A Curtiss spokesman said at least two newer models of pursuit planes soon to be tested by the Army are designed to exceed the Hawk 75A in speed.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

At a family dinner at the White House the other evening President Roosevelt entertained the table by telling some of the Roosevelt jokes that have reached his ear.

Sen. Reynolds
. . . lithe and fit.

One story he told, so the tale goes, involved an imaginary dinner where Mr. Roosevelt, Mussolini and Hitler are talking things over.

* * * *

Hitler is expatiating about what territories he plans to seize and what he intends to do with the world, until Mussolini can endure it no longer.

"Who told you that you could get away with all that?" the Duce demanded.

"God did!" asserted Hitler.

"I don't remember mentioning it!" says the Roosevelt in the fable.

Apparently the President enjoys Roosevelt jokes as much as do his critics.

MILLIONS FOR DEFENSE: My spies in Berlin and Tokyo have stolen the plans for the two murderous weapons pictured herewith. I hereby transmit them to Gen. Malin Craig, the chief of staff.

We mustn't let any other country get ahead of us in the matter of battering rams and war chariots. Some carping critics may say the battering ram is purely an offensive weapon. A lot they know about modern warfare!

"—A murderous contraption"

To illustrate the conflict between purposes and methods, a favorite sector of attack on the New Dealers, an eminent Republican Senator is telling a story which used to be a favorite of President Taft.

When Reed Smoot was elected to the Senate from Utah, a delegation of Senators called on Senator Boies Penrose, of the committee on elections, to protest. It was before the Mormons banned polygamy.

* * * *

"It's disgraceful," said one Senator, "to expect us to sit in the Senate with a man who tolerates polygamy!"

One of the indignant Senators was a man whose indiscretions were notorious in Washington. Penrose leaned back and looked at him directly.

"After all, gentlemen," he said, "Senator Smoot has only one wife. And frankly, it is less disturbing to me to sit in the Senate with a polygamist who doesn't polyg than with a monogamist who doesn't monog."

* * * *

You voters can't always get rid of a member of Congress merely by defeating him at the polls.

Around the Capitol some former members still wield more influence than their successors; more than most present members. Jim Watson, of Indiana, for example, is still highly influential; and after all these years spends more time in the Capital than some members; Brookhart, of Iowa, still wields a nimble pitchfork for the farmers; O'Connor, of the Sixth New York, carries more weight than Fay, his successor; Maverick, far from the marble halls, is still the mightiest of the Young Turks (he had an hour's chat with the President not long ago), and McAdoo still commands more attention than many Senators.

"—an offensive weapon?"

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: Eight Italians living in Washington—mostly barbers and waiters—recently petitioned the Italian Embassy, protesting against the new Italian "racial" laws which imitate the German proscriptions. The Italian diplomats were in something of a quandary about passing the protest on to the Palazzo Venezia, since dictators like to hear only what they like to hear.

Dewey Short, the only Republican Congressman from Missouri, received a request from a constituent, a lady of 60, asking him to send her a bicycle for her birthday . . . He is thinking of forwarding the letter to the White House.

CAPITAL CAPERS: The only diplomat in town who looks sadder than the Czech Minister these days is the German charge d'affaires . . . Senator Bob Reynolds (N. C.) works out in a gym an hour a day; he has the muscles of a shot-putter and the veins on the backs of his hands are as smooth as a lad's of 15 . . . The Supreme Court docket is leaner than usual; at the Justice Department they think businessmen are beginning to ignore the advice of their lawyers to sue the Government.

Splawn Warns Rate Wars Peril Railways

Congress Should Go To Roads' Aid, Says ICC Member

By the Associated Press.

A House committee was told yesterday that the railroads might be destroyed by transportation rate wars if Congress did not go to their assistance.

The witness, Walter M. W. Splawn, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, indicated a belief that in future years the carriers would be needed even more than they are now. He said it was possible that new enterprise and a rising business trend would lift the volume of traffic to the levels of ten years ago. He warned, too, of the necessity of an adequate transportation system in periods of national emergency.

Splawn, a former chairman of the ICC, was the first witness before the House Interstate Commerce Committee which is considering general transportation legislation. He helped prepare the legislation, which would revamp the ICC, authorize it to set minimum fares and freight charges for interstate shipments, and permit the railroads rather than the ICC to initiate reorganization and consolidation programs.

Splawn said that "rate wars are being waged all over the country" that "threaten maintenance and impairment of the capital investment" of many interstate carriers.

He specifically urged approval of one section of the measure which was intended to induce transportation agencies to abandon "wars for traffic" which damaged themselves and performed no public service.

Forum to Discuss District Suffrage To Be Held Friday

All persons interested in obtaining the vote for Washingtonians were urged yesterday to attend the Round Table Forum on District Suffrage Friday evening at the National Press Club auditorium.

Legislators who will appear include Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska; Senator William H. King, of Utah; Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas; Representative Hatton W. Sumners, of Texas; Representative Charles F. McLaughlin, of Nebraska, and Representative William D. Byron, of Maryland.

Speakers include Sefton Darr, president of the District Bar; William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, and William H. Mondell, vice president, District Suffrage Association.

Georgians Move To Ban Officials As Contractors

Atlanta, Jan. 24 (AP).—A group of Georgia legislators moved today to ban State and Federal officials or employes from collecting fees as contractors or architects of State buildings.

The measure was proposed as the House considered a proposed State hospital authority to expedite a $4,000,000 expansion at the Milledgeville Hospital for the Insane after questions in a hearing concerning connections of L. W. (Chip) Robert, jr., Democratic National Committee secretary and head of an Atlanta architectural and engineering firm, with the work at Milledgeville.

10 Feet of Personal Information

Since accusations of politics in relief have been made, PWA has emphasized the need for full personal information on all applications for jobs. The Capital office received an application from a Hanska, Minn., man. It was 10 feet long and 10,000 words gave his qualifications. Holding the missive are (bottom to top) Joan Herbert, Virginia Batsel and Mary Louise Barry, all of the PWA office.

The Gallup Poll

Senate Resolution Providing 6-Year Presidential Term Opposed by Voters

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 24.—A constitutional amendment for a six-year Presidential term, introduced recently in Congress by Senator Burke and indorsed by the Women's National Democratic Club, does not meet with popular approval and probably would not be ratified if put up to the people at this time, judging by the results of a national survey of opinion just completed by the American Institute.

GALLUP

The study finds that more than seven voters in every ten oppose the plan for a six-year term with no re-election, and that there is no substantial difference in attitude toward the question between Democrats and Republicans. The chief reason for the vote against the plan is expressed in one typical statement by a voter in Connecticut: "If a President is good we can have him for eight years; if he's bad he can be out in four. So why have six years?

The question put to a cross-section of voters in all States was: "Would you favor changing the term of office of the President of the United States to one six-year term with no re-election?"

The vote:

Yes	24%
No	76

One interesting sidelight is the present-day attitude of voters in the South. At the time of the Civil War the Constitution of the Southern Confederacy provided for a six-year term, and Jefferson Davis took office on that basis. Today, Southern voters reached in the survey are seven to three against a six-year term.

National opinion on the six-year term issue has been highly stable in recent years, for when the Institute conducted a survey on the same question in June, 1936, the vote was virtually the same as today. In both surveys Democrats and Republicans were more than 70 per cent opposed.

In fact all the Institute's studies on the length of Presidential terms point to public satisfaction with the present system. Not only is the six-year term opposed by the majority but also a third term for President Roosevelt, on which there was a 2 to 1 negative vote in the last Institute test.

The chief argument put forward by proponents of the six-year term with no re-election is that if a President cannot run again he will not have to devote so much time to playing politics. This point is stressed by the Women's National Democratic Club and also advanced by many voters in the Institute's survey. Others add that "six years would give the President a better opportunity to carry out his program" and that there would be less "election-year uncertainty in business" if elections were held every six years instead of every four.

Among voters who take the other side of the issue, however, such comments as the following are typical: "If we want to get rid of a President we'll be glad the term is only four years," or "if a man is worthy we couldn't put him in again," or "a poor President could do much damage in six years." A small number of voters also expressed the view that if a President is not eligible for re-election he may be tempted to "ignore the wishes of the people."

Norris Charges Utilities Scared Power Investors

By the Associated Press.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, said yesterday "propaganda of private power companies" had frightened away financing of a $20,000,000 purchase of private utilities in Nebraska by publicly owned projects.

Norris said the Columbus and Tri-County projects in Nebraska had agreed on a purchase price for properties of the Iowa-Nebraska Power Co. only to have "moneyed men back out of an agreement to finance about $20,000,000 bonds for the purchase."

Public works officials said the public power districts, which already have received more than $60,000,000 from PWA, might get new PWA grants or RFC loans to enable them to operate in competition with the private companies.

Fitness Query On Amlie Irks President

Roosevelt Appears Resentful as Writer Asks Qualifications

President Roosevelt appeared resentful at his press conference yesterday when a newspaperman asked him to name the qualifications of former Representative Thomas R. Amlie, who has been appointed to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Previously, the President had bantered with newspapermen over the appointment. Asked whether Amlie, Wisconsin Progressive who was defeated in the primary race for Senator, had a plan to solve the railroad problem, he wondered who did have—unless it were the Almighty.

In response to a further question, he explained that he had to name a non-Democrat. The I. C. C. consists of 11 members, of whom not more than six can be members of one political party.

President Turns on Questioner

There are now six Democrats on the commission. Amlie has been named to succeed Commissioner Balthasar H. Meyer, a Republican, whose term is expiring.

Amlie, the President pointed out, fulfilled the requirement that someone besides a Democrat be named. Asked if Republicans were barred from appointment to the place given Amlie, the President replied in the negative. He then asked what Amlie's political affiliation was.

Questioned as to what Amlie's qualifications were, the President adopted a serious tone. He asked whether the questioner thought he would send up a nomination unless he regarded the appointee as qualified.

The newspaperman said he was curious to know wherein Amlie was qualified to deal with the transportation problem. The President then wanted to know whether such a question had been asked at previous press conferences. He characterized as absurd the idea that he should be called upon to detail the record of an appointee in order to convey an idea of his qualifications.

Meanwhile, opposition to Amlie's appointment broke out in the House and in his home State, Wisconsin. Representative Gifford (Republican), Massachusetts, declared Amlie was "the least qualified of any public man to carry on the work of the commission."

"Isn't the Nation to be considered in these appointments?" he asked. "The people of Wisconsin had spoken and rebuked him."

Nomination Recall Urged

Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, recalled that Amlie had said "we could continue to have deficits for 20 years."

The reference was to a statement made by Amlie in the House, November 24, 1937, in which he ridiculed arguments that continued spending threatened the Government with bankruptcy.

[William D. Carroll, chairman of the State Democratic Central Committee at Racine, Wis., demanded recall or defeat in the Senate of President Roosevelt's nomination of Amlie, the Associated Press reported.

[Carroll, addressing the Jackson Club at Racine, Wis., said Amlie was "one of the most insistent spokesmen of those radicals who are against the American scheme of things . . . He has such firm opinions on Government ownership of railroads as to prevent him from using good judgment on the pressing problems of railroads in private ownership," the report said.]

Amlie, generally regarded as being "further to the left" than the rank and file of the Progressive Party, sponsored legislation for control of industry by a 25 per cent processing tax and for Government ownership and management of all industry, commerce and finance.

His nomination has been referred to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Roosevelts Guests At Ft. Myer Tonight

President and Mrs. Roosevelt announced yesterday they would attend the birthday horse show at Fort Myer tonight, receipts of which will go to the infantile paralysis fund.

O'Mahoney, Clashing With Hull, Urges Senate Approval of Reciprocal Trade Pacts

By the Associated Press.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, asked the Senate yesterday to go on record as favoring Senate ratification of reciprocal trade treaties before they could become effective.

O'MAHONEY

The Wyoming Senator, who clashed recently with Secretary of State Hull over negotiations for revision of the Cuban trade agreement, introduced a resolution which if adopted, would declare such agreements to be treaties and subject them to Senate scrutiny.

"I don't believe that appointive officers who have no intimate contact with the masses of the people should be permitted to trade away their markets without the knowledge in advance of the elected representatives of the people," the Senator said.

Representative Crawford (Republican), of Michigan, asked Representative Gifford (Republican), of Massachusetts, in the House yesterday if he could explain a profit which the Treasury made with its $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund last year.

"They say that when the French franc goes down they buy," Gifford asserted. "And when it goes 'bop' they make some money."

A committee of approximately 20 railroad passenger traffic managers discussed the Hastings postalization plan at headquarters of the Association of American Railroads. The committee will draft a report on the plan for the Traffic Executives Association.

President Roosevelt autographed a photograph for Capitol Physician George W. Calver—and twitted Vice President Garner at the same time.

The Photograph, showing Mr. Roosevelt and the Vice President laughing together, was inscribed by Garner:

"To Dr. Calver, for making me 'try' to behave."

When Dr. Calver asked for Mr. Roosevelt's autograph, the President wrote:

"To Dr. Calver—keep on trying!"

"When five unemployed people go back into private industry," Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Kentucky, told the Senate yesterday, "only one of them, on the average, comes off the WPA pay rolls."

"It's like the story of the frog in the well," interjected Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri. "He jumped up one step and fell back two."

"No," Barkley responded, "it's like jumping up two steps and falling back one."

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, then threw the chamber into laughter when he said, "That frog went to hell, and that's where we're going."

Peace Parley Urges Study Of War Causes

600 Delegates Told Prevention Lies in Removing Origins

Prevention of war through analysis of its basic causes was urged by every speaker in yesterday's program of the Conference for the Cause and Cure of War.

More than 600 delegates representing 6,000,000 women, last night heard Vera Micheles Dean term the Munich accord "a watershed between two historical periods."

"Nazism and Communism," she said, "are not disconnected phenomena. Both movements outwardly different in their national settings, starting points and objectives, represented a revolt of the dispossessed classes against industrial capitalism, feudalism, the officer class and the politically minded church. Both, to the accompaniment of terrorism and repression of dissident minorities, seek to provide the masses with material opportunities and a taste of power. And, paradoxically enough, both represent an effort to realize the promises held out by the political democracies of the nineteenth century.

Peace Termed Ruthless

The Munich settlement, she concluded, marked the apogee of Nazi diplomacy and proved "a victorious Germany could impose as ruthless a peace as that of Versailles."

Samuel Guy Inman, secretary of the Committee on Co-operation in Latin America, said the Lima Conference had accomplished more than a previous century of inter-American conferences and that although in the practical field matters were left wide open, yet the Americas stand by the general principle of trade barrier elimination.

Earlier the conference heard Charles G. Fenwick, professor of political science at Bryn Mawr College, Pennsylvania, declare: "We must use our great economic power as deterrent to those who would break their treaties with us and create conditions of war. . . ."

Urges World Police Force

A former member of the Saar plebiscite commission, Miss Sarah Wambaugh said: "Force without law is violence, but force in itself is not an evil. Two requisites to peace machinery are a permanent commission of equity in the League of Nations to investigate dangerous situations and make recommendations before conflict has broken out, and an international police force."

Frieda S. Miller, industrial commissioner of New York State, said one of the most effective machines for international co-operation, even though it be within the limited field of labor-industry relationship, is the International Labor Organization, which deals realistically with the causes of conflict within this field.

The afternoon session was devoted to planning regional and State conferences which will carry the peace program on through the year with the objective of attracting as much public attention as possible. An outline of possible methods toward this end was given by Mrs. Frederic Beggs, chairman of international relations of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Prisoner Will Paint Upper Marlboro Jail

Because an inmate was "tired of loafing," the Upper Marlboro, Md., jail is to get a fresh coat of paint.

Elmer Meska, 24, Capitol Heights painter committed for 60 days on traffic charges, told Sheriff William E. Clifton he would like to paint the jail. Yesterday the county commissioners agreed to furnish the paint and pay the prisoner 50 cents a day for the work.

Hope Hampton's Husband Shot Mysteriously

Hope Hampton and Jules Brulatour

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 24.—The shooting of Jules Brulatour, 68, wealthy husband of Actress Hope Hampton, was disclosed late today as police investigated delay in reporting the incident and searched for the gun and a bullet removed from his neck.

They also sought to check the ownership of the weapon.

Declaring discrepancies were apparent in explanations of the shooting, District Attorney Dewey tonight ordered a "vigorous investigation."

The pioneer movie magnate was shot late Sunday and taken to a hospital, where he reported today he shot himself accidentally while cleaning his chauffeur's revolver.

Detectives quoted Dr. Carl Theobald as saying Miss Hampton telephoned him Brulatour had fallen downstairs.

Belatedly discovered hospital records showed Dr. Hermann Fischer removed a .32-caliber slug from Brulatour's neck at 1:30 a. m. Monday.

Dr. Fischer said he handed the extracted slug to Miss Hampton.

She told detectives she did not know what she had done with the bullet, and Capt. Thomas Lenahan said the gun also was missing.

Roosevelt Urges More Funds for Monopoly Probe

Plans were made yesterday to carry forward the antimonopoly investigation as President Roosevelt announced that he would ask Congress shortly to appropriate additional funds for the inquiry.

Meanwhile, Chairman William O. Douglas, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, said the commission was "ready at any time" to present to the committee data gathered in its investigation of insurance companies.

Fairbrother Pupils Pioneer In Soil Study

Even First Graders Are Taught Value Of Conservation

A pioneering experiment designed to instill in young minds the value of land preservation to national prosperity is underway at the Fairbrother - Rossell elementary school where 450 youngsters are making a scientific study of soil conservation.

The children are learning how to combat erosion in a step looking to eventual integration of soil conservation courses in regular school curricula.

The youthful research workers daily undertake experiments demonstrating methods of preventing erosion, qualities of certain soils, value of contour and terrace farming, influence of weather and other elements in a conservation program.

First Graders Make Posters

First graders are studying conservation methods from the farmer's outlook. Most of their work consists of studying pictures of control projects and making posters. In one of the classrooms the model farm of a "wise farmer" has been built. Another model shows the badly eroded farm of a "foolish farmer."

Each phase of the experiment is adapted to the grade level and the mental level of the students, Miss D. A. Cook, principal, explained, and serves as an adjunct to the regular classroom studies.

Second graders are taking up a comparison of the condition of lands today as compared with the days of the Puritans. In the third grade, where pupils prepare food and operate the school cafeteria, conservation is studied from the food standpoint.

Fourth grade students break down soils to study quality, action of water on various types and other features. In the fifth grade, students have built their own weather observation bureau.

Pupils Take Field Trips

Several soil experts from the Soil Conservation Service have lectured at assemblies and the children have made field trips to see gullies in the making.

"This kind of work is being done in a few elementary schools in the West but is practically an untouched field in this area," said Miss Cook.

"The experiment being worked out at the Fairbrother School is part of a Nation-wide program. We hope this local project is going to give us much valuable material."

Miss Cook said a magazine is now in the making which will describe the students' scientific studies. Pupils will contribute to the magazine, which will be illustrated with pictures they have snapped on field trips.

Students Protest Sale of Beer, Dancing in Street Near School

McKinley High Pupils Object to Renewal Of License

A half dozen students of McKinley High School were excused from their classes yesterday to protest before the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board that sale of beer in the school neighborhood "tempted the rough element of students to congregate . . . and make noise."

They testified at a hearing on renewal of the beer license of Morris Brown, 141 Uhland terrace northeast. Brown appeared at the hearing, but did not testify.

One of the students, Ruth Geran, 16, told the board she preferred not to walk in the neighborhood because of "tough" boys who loiter on Uhland terrace. "They clutter up the street with paper, too," she added.

Hear "Name Calling"

Passersby sometimes hear "name calling" by "rough" boys near the store, 17-year-old Robert Searls testified.

Similar testimony was given by Elizabeth Caw, 16; Kenneth Clark, 16, and Charlotte Fry, 17, all McKinley students.

The protestants were led by Dr. Reginald Heber Stone, pastor of the Lincoln Road M. E. Church, whose daughter, Pauline, 16, also a McKinley student, testified that she and a group from the Young People's League at the church had circulated a petition for the hearing.

One feature of the conduct of the so-called "tough element" was attacked in the testimony of both Dr. Stone and the students. That was the "big apple."

"Why, "declared Dr. Stone," the boys and girls get right out in the street and do the 'big apple.' ".

Favors License Renewals

Verbal clashes between Dr. Stone and witnesses appearing in favor of renewal of the license frequently threw the hearing into confusion. One of the witnesses for the license, George E. Crawford, 2037 Second street northeast, said boys who were brought up in the neighborhood were not "demoralized by the sale of beer."

"Boys will be boys and no matter where they gather there's bound to be noise," he declared.

Mrs. W. Baldwin, 158 U street northwest, pointed out that with no playgrounds in the neighborhood, boys "just naturally" gathered on Uhland terrace to play ball and dance the 'big apple.' Mrs. Anna C. Francis, pointing out that she lived across the street from the school, declared:

"I've never seen such carrying on as occurs in front of my house by the students and I don't sell beer."

An original protest on the license renewal was lodged with the board December 1, 1938. A hearing was held December 13 and the board then notified Dr. Stone the license would be renewed since there was no violation of regulations. Dr. Stone protested and a rehearing was granted.

The board announced its decision would be made public today.

Give D. C. Back to States—Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Roosevelt suggested yesterday that one way of improving social welfare conditions in the District of Columbia might be to restrict the National Capital area to Government buildings and place everything else either in Virginia or Maryland.

This would be a quicker route to improvement than the suffrage way, she ventured, expressing the doubt that all States were sufficiently interested in the District to ratify a suffrage amendment.

Then, she pointed out, residents would have an opportunity for self government.

The First Lady also discussed her recent visit to Gallinger Hospital.

"Like everything else of a social welfare nature in Washington," she declared, "Gallinger is operated with half the staff it needs."

She advised two steps to improve Gallinger conditions—a visit to the hospital by a Congressional committee and an increased health appropriation.

Many Found With Several Security Cards

Reports by Employers Must Show Numbers, Names, Aide Advises

Quarterly reports to the Social Security Board, due January 31, must bear both the names and account numbers of employes, since names frequently are duplicated, Victor Sadd, field office manager here, declared yesterday.

Confusion in making applications for listing in the records of the Social Security Board, he added, persists among applicants, although more than 270,000 numbers have been assigned persons employed in the District in the last two years.

Some Have Several Cards

Most frequent errors, he noted, were ages not in agreement with dates of birth, initials given in place of full names; married names of mothers listed instead of maiden names.

"Working girls who have married," he continued, "want their names changed on their social security cards.

"Some workers find that their ages were not given correctly when they applied for their account numbers. Others, who do not thoroughly understand the purposes of their account numbers, have been found to possess several cards and still others move from place to place and fail to receive their cards. In all such cases, the field office of the board has been called upon to make proper adjustments."

Numbers Necessary

After pointing out that each worker's social security number should be included in the employer's report to the Federal Government, he emphasized that benefits will be based on wages received from the time the program went into effect.

"It is therefore important," he declared, "that each employe's social security account contain a record of every dollar of his wages from January 1, 1937 until he reaches age 65."

British Youths To Fill Ranks If War Comes

Nation, Remembering 1914, to Keep Skilled Workmen at Home

By Frank R. Kelley

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Jan. 24.—In the event of war the British government intends to "freeze" half the male working population of 14,000,000 in their present jobs and pour the remainder into the fighting forces and civilian defense services.

This fact emerged today when the government disclosed its plans for voluntary national service under which a partial census of the nation's man and woman power will be taken to provide a basis for immediate conscription should Britain be involved in a major conflict.

Britain wants to avoid her tragic mistake of 1914-18 when skilled men were torn from valuable work at home only to flounder and be slaughtered in the front lines in France, leaving raw youths to carry on vital industries. Next time youth will provide most of the cannon fodder while proficient workers are kept back as indispensable cogs in the war machinery.

Occupations Listed

In preparation for this step the government today issued a long list of "reserved occupations" which are considered of such national importance that workers will be prevented from leaving them for other jobs in war time, except in certain instances.

On the reserve list are armaments, agriculture, textiles, transport, and the manufacture and distribution of food.

Between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 men and a small number of women between the ages of 18 and 64 are on the reserve list. About 3,000,000 of these are over 45, and only one man in five aged 18 to 25 is affected.

Approximately 7,000,000 other workers whose services would not be essential are left free to volunteer for any of the dozens of military or semi-military forces, a list of which the government is placing on 20,000,000 breakfast tables throughout the British Isles tomorrow morning.

Recruiting Campaign

Until March an intensive recruiting campaign will be conducted with the object of informing workers whether they are on the reserve list, and if not of enlisting them for full or part-time training in the army, navy, air force or air raid precautions work. For civilian defense alone the government hopes to obtain 1,800,000 recruits including a "first line" of 1,200,000 and a 50 per cent reserve.

The results of the campaign will be reviewed in March by Prime Minister Chamberlain and his cabinet. If it falls below expectations, as many predict, compulsory national service, along the lines of the dictator countries, will be inevitable.

The government prefers to make its first appeal on a voluntary basis because compulsion would "split the country from end to end." Sir John Anderson, lord privy seal, who is in charge of the campaign, declared today.

"War Discounted"

"To avoid misunderstanding, let me say at once that the preparations we are making do not mean that we expect war. Though we have unfortunately to reckon with the possibility of war we do not expect war, either now or in the near future. We hope that it may never come, but we recognize that the surest method of averting war is to be prepared.

"Our method has been to gather our strength slowly, to marshal our resources steadily and in the end, inexorably.

"In the new kind of war that we may have to face, there may not be time for us to complete our preparations after war has once begun. This war will differ in two ways from anything that this country has known. It will be an invasion of our country, invasion by air—sudden, swift, perhaps almost contiguous. Such air attacks will, no doubt, have military objectives, but they will also be a test of the courage and steadiness of the ordinary people of the country.

Double Answer

"To such a threat we can give a double answer: An 'active' defense, strong and well equipped, which drives off the raiders or inflicts such losses upon them that they hesitate to attack. That is the defense which our air force and its auxiliaries and the territorial army, with its anti-aircraft units will undertake, a defense which, as we know, they will maintain to the utmost limits of human courage and human endurance.

"And behind their ranks we must build up what is, I think, perhaps wrongly termed our 'passive' defense—the immediate action of organized help by the citizen body to guard people, to rescue them to repair quickly the damage of fire or explosion, so that we can maintain our national war effort."

Former Kaiser Wilhelm Entertains Old Friends

Doorn, The Netherlands, Jan. 24 (AP).—Former Kaiser Wilhelm, who will be 80 Friday, today entertained a group of friends, including Field Marshal August von Mackensen, 89, and Admiral Ehrhardt von Schmidt, 75, at a luncheon.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

If other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained. Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Insurgents Enter Barcelona; Anarchists Bar Blazing Streets

Spain

rese would lead the triumphal entry expected at dawn.

Franco, it was said realizes the Moors would create an unfavorable impression at a time when he is desirous of quickly pacifying Barcelona's population.

The insurgents reached Barcelona proper after a day of swift encircling operations that included the fall of three key towns—Manresa, Torrasa and Martorell—and collapse of the government's last line outside the capital along the Llobregat River.

The loyalists had counted upon the Llobregat to serve as a "moat," but six columns of insurgents crossed the flood-swollen river at four points.

In 33 days Franco's 300,000 Spaniards, Moors, Italians and Germans have stormed their way 78 miles across some of Spain's most rugged country—from the Segre Valley to Barcelona.

They have taken 13,000 square miles of territory from the loyalists—an area as large as Massachusetts and New Jersey combined—and 500 cities, towns and villages.

Virtually every one of the cities, towns and villages has fallen without a real struggle.

Franco was said to believe that the Barcelonians with possible exception of some of the extremists would have no appetite for suicidal resistance in the streets now that the loyalist government of Premier Juan Negrin had fled northward, to the vicinity of either Gerona or Figueras, the latter only 18 miles from the French border.

Barcelona's electricity was cut off. It was impossible to reach the city by telephone shortly before midnight although early evening dispatches from correspondents there said thousands of workers were rushed to the southern and western outskirts to throw up hasty fortifications.

Girls marched grimly beside their sweethearts to battle the enemy at the gates.

The French government, fearing an influx of loyalist refugees across the Pyrenees passes, rushed several thousand additional mobile guards and Senegalese troops to the frontier with orders to turn them back.

Julio Alvarez del Vayo, loyalist foreign minister who has was en route to Catalonia tonight, made a final futile appeal in Paris to French Foreign Minister Bonnet for refuge on French soil for 150,000.

Bonnet said such a thing was financially impossible, but promised France would give haven to women, children and old persons.

It was suggested Franco might be asked to consent to a "neutral zone" across the frontier—perhaps in the tiny Republic of Andorra—for refugees. If Franco and Andorra agree, France and Britain would arrange to feed the refugees, it was said.

Franco encircled almost all of Barcelona's suburbs on the south and southwest late in the evening when Gen. Yague's Moors, operating up the coast road, formed a liaison with insurgent Navarrese and captured Martorell, 10 miles west of the capital.

The fall of Manresa, 26 miles northwest of Barcelona, gave the insurgents control of a hub of five important highways and the only railroad in that region serving the capital's outposts.

Army Program In Congress Equips Million

tial hearings would be had, with all sides being heard.

Representative Shannon (Democrat), of Missouri, warned at the meeting that "an European war over racial discrimination" was "only a few months off" and that the United States would be sure to be involved.

As the committee prepared to consider the $85,000,000 air base program, it received another Administration proposal to expand naval shore facilities. The measure is to provide a $6,500,000 supply base at Oakland, Calif.

Senator Walsh, chairman of the Senate Naval Committee, yesterday said he agreed with the President's stand on the proposed development of Guam. This, he said, was to go ahead with the proposed harbor development and construction of barracks and hangars contemplated under the bill and await world developments before action on the island's fortification.

Senate Awaits House

Stating that his committee would delay consideration of the program until after the House hearings, Senator Walsh revealed that the present measure for building air bases was the first of an annual shore development program to carry out the recommendations of the Naval board which recently reported to Congress. The board proposed a submarine as well as an air base at Guam.

Meanwhile, Chairmen Sheppard and May of the Military committees presented Administration bills to carry out the air training phases of the Administration program and to augment the defenses of the Panama Canal. Provisions of the air training measures reveal for the first time that the War Department intends to give a military status to students attending civilian aviation schools. The bill also provides for the War Department to select civilian flying schools, train their instructors, and lend Government airplanes and equipment. The Panama bill would provide $23,750,000 for buildings and utilities to house "antiaircraft, seacoast defense and auxiliary units most urgently needed for the defense of the Panama Canal."

Army Aides Heard

The House Military Committee heard Brig. Gens. R. M. Beck and George P. Tyner, assistant chiefs of staff, urge approval of the $110,000,000 project to provide weapons for the peacetime Army and the war reserve.

Explaining that in the event of a major war we would have to mobilize 1,000,000 men plus 67,000 officers for the defense of the United States, Alaska and Puerto Rico, Gen. Beck said essential equipment not obtainable in an emergency should be ready for them.

On mobilization day, the general said, the Regular Army and Regular Army Reserve would be called out first, followed in a few days by the National Guard harbor and antiaircraft defenses, and the remainder of the Guard within a month. Three hundred thousand men would be recruited from civil life in the first month, with 200,000 sought each month thereafter until the universal draft law contemplated would become effective, he said.

Committee consideration of the Army's part in the half billion dollar defense program will probably be concluded this week. Chairman May of the House Military Committee said his group had only one other War Department witness after hearing Maj. Gen. C. M. Wesson, Chief of Ordnance, today. Thereupon, he said, opponents of the expansion may have their innings. Chairman Sheppard stated the Senate Military Committee is likely to finish consideration of the President's message proposals by the week-end.

40 U. S. Citizens Board Cruiser At Barcelona

Perpignan, France, Jan. 24 (AP).—An assistant United States naval attache, Capt. Ross Hillencutter, from the Paris embassy, crossed the frontier into France tonight after a week in Spain rounding up United States citizens in the Barcelona zone. He said only about 40 of the 180 Americans in the zone had decided to board the Omaha.

The legation staff was ordered by the State Department in Washington to board the Omaha. Americans still in the legation included the charge d'affaires, Walter Thurston, and his secretaries, Charles Gilbert and W. E. Krieger; Vice Consul Douglas Flood and John J. Jernigan, and the Paris naval attache, Capt. Francis Cogswell.

American officials and employes of the Spanish telephone company also planned to board the Omaha.

today, but again it is what the President permits it to be."

Senator Nye, leader of the neutrality bloc on Capitol Hill, declared Republicans are "fast reaching the conclusion that there can be no intelligent policy of national defense without a knowledge of what is our foreign policy. He called for "a declaration of foreign policy by our Government, a declaration subject at once to the approval or disapproval of the people and their representatives.

He voiced fear of House members that the rearmament program may be directed toward "dangerous intervention in the international frictions and discords of other people."

Hull Weighs Stimson Plea

Secretary of State Hull said yesterday that the Stimson letter to him was being given consideration. However, in the department there was no outward indication of any change in the sentiment expressed in a letter from Hull to Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, last March. At that time Secretary Hull wrote:

"The last paragraph of the act of January 8, 1937, provides that 'when in the judgment of the President the conditions described in this resolution have ceased to exist, he shall proclaim such fact, and the provisions hereof shall thereupon cease to apply.'

"It is manifest . . . that the state of civil strife in Spain described in the joint resolution of Congress of January 8, 1937, has not ceased to exist. Accordingly, even if the proclamation of the President of May 1, 1937, were to be revoked, the prohibition upon the export of arms, ammunition and implements of war to Spain laid down in the joint resolution of Congress approved January 8, 1937, would still remain in effect."

This was taken to hold that Congress alone could end the embargo.

'Arm in Time Of Peace, War Chief Insists

Woodring Declares Days Of Formal Declarations Of Conflict Are Past

The actual impact of aerial bombs on the locks of the Panama Canal may signalize the abrupt entrance of the United States into a major armed conflict, Secretary of War Woodring last night told delegates to the fourteenth annual Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense.

A portion of Secretary Woodring's speech as released by the War Department yesterday but not delivered by Woodring included an attack on two European nations, unnamed, which, the text said, had developed vast air forces to terrorize other nations, and threaten the naval bases of Great Britain.

Speaking from a rostrum decked with the flags of 33 patriotic organizations, he told the 1,500 delegates and guests who overflowed the grand ballroom of the Mayflower that while our armed forces now rank about twentieth in the world in numbers, we are potentially the most powerful military nation in the world.

"We have the potential soldiers of high intelligence, we lead in industrial efficiency, and we are virtually, though not completely, independent in the matter of raw materials," he said. "Howeverer, it is imperative that we make available in peace time the crtical items of munitions that initially will be consumed in the event of war."

He explained that these munitions require between a year and a year and a half for production, and added that formal declaration of war has been relegated to the history book. "A billion dollars made available the day war breaks upon us," he pointed out, "will not provide 10 cents' worth of the critical items to which I have reference."

Reorientation Needed

Calling attention to the reaffirmation of the Monroe Doctrine by the President, Woodring said: "This cardinal policy of the Government of the United States demands reorientation of our national defense requirements. I also re-emphasize that technical improvements in the machines of war alone make mandatory reconsideration of our defensive armament."

Stephen F. Chadwick, national commander of the American Legion, made a plea for the election of representatives worthy of intrusting with the right at all times to meet aggression before it develops into invasion.

"If some of our public representatives of today are not worthy of our trust," he said, "then let us impress into the public service representatives in whom we have confidence, but let us not abandon the lessons of history and destroy the valuable elements of security which exist in the flexibility found in our representative system of government."

Mrs. James Morris, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, and chairman of the conference, made an address of welcome and introduced the speakers.

Officers of the conference made an impressive entrance, parading down the aisles with massed colors

'Unseen Force' Felled Clipper, Officer's Idea

Carburetor Ice Denied, 'Rush of Static' Cited As Investigation Opens

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 24.—The British air ministry tonight began investigation of the mysterious power-failure crash at sea of the Imperial Airways flying boat Cavalier with the loss of three lives.

"The Cavalier was equipped to combat ice," said 31-year-old Capt. M. Rowland Alderson, who was rescued with nine others midway between New York and Bermuda.

"At no time did I have the slightest fear of ice formation—either on the wings or clogging the carburetors. I have flown through far worse conditions. The whole thing is a mystery to me."

"Unseen Force" Blamed

Radio Engineer Patrick Chapman suggested some strange "unseen force" may have played the role of destroyer.

"Just before I sent out the S O S," he said, "I saw a dirty patch ahead and I started getting static. We had been flying in cold, clear skies.

"It was not normal static, such as you get on your radio. It was a terrific rush—an outburst of static that created quite a charge in the plane."

Pirie Investigates

Group Capt. George Pirie, attached to the British Embassy in Washington, started the investigation by taking depositions from survivors. Official hearings, he said, would be held later at Hamilton, Bermuda.

The United States Government informed Imperial Airways it would like to have a Federal expert sit in as an "observer."

British Warships And Fliers Hunt For Missing Plane

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 24.—British warships and the Royal Air Force searched the English channel today for a bombing plane with six aboard, missing since yesterday's violent storm which caused at least 14 deaths and widespread damage to Atlantic shipping.

Lloyds, which received S O S signals from 15 ships yesterday, reported several of the vessels making for home ports. There were no further reports from the others, including the 7,230-ton Chilean passenger ship Aconcagua, but there was little anxiety because weather had moderated.

The Aconcagua, with a crew estimated to number 200 and an undisclosed number of passengers, reported at noon Sunday that damaged steering gear had left her helpless 200 miles west of Ireland.

Refugee Committee Honors Dorothy Thompson at Dinner

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 24.—As a tribute to her service in the cause of oppressed minorities in central Europe and elsewhere, Miss Dorothy Thompson, special writer for The Washington Post, was honored tonight at a dinner arranged by the American Committee for Christian German Refugees and sponsored by 400 citizens of various faiths.

Former State Supreme Court Justice William Harman Black was toastmaster and Pearl Buck, who recently received the Nobel prize in literature, was the principal speaker.

Miss Buck read letters and telegrams of tribute to Miss Thompson from many leading personalities of the Nation, including former President Hoover, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Dr. Albert Einstein, Gov. Lehman, Mayor LaGuardia, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, former United States Minister to Denmark; Herbert Bayard Swope, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise and Conde Nast, publisher.

The messages were bound in a book which was presented to Miss Thompson.

Mrs. Roosevelt said in her message: "Miss Thompson has shown great courage and zeal and those who like and admire her gift of expression are deeply grateful to her for having raised it in this cause."

Among others who paid tribute to Miss Thompson were State Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora, Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of the University of Newark, and Dr. Guy Emery Shipler, editor of The Churchman.

Miss Thompson was the third person to be honored with a dinner by the American Committee for Christian German Refugees. Previous dinners were for Thomas Mann, German novelist, and Lotte Lehmann, Austrian opera singer, both of whom now live in the United States.

At the speakers' table last night were Mrs. Ogden Reid, vice president of the New York Herald Tribune; Dr. William Jay Schieffelin, and James M. Speers, chairman of the American Committee for Christian Refugees and a member of President Roosevelt's advisory commitee on refugees.

'Mlle. Lucie' Sues As Granddaughter Of Edward VII

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Jan. 24.—A modest little middle-aged woman, who said her name was "just Mlle. Lucie," told a court here today that she was the legitimate granddaughter of the late King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra.

In evidence, she exhibited pictures of her right thigh, showing, she said, traces of the royal arms of England and Prussia that were tattooed on her brother and herself soon after birth. She was in court seeking one franc damages from the newspaper, Paris Soir, for what she claimed was misrepresentation of her extraordinary case.

She said she was the daughter of the Duke of Clarence, eldest son of King Edward, and the duke's wife, Princess Fredericka Victoria of Prussia. According to her story, the marriage was secret and was dissolved soon after, by divorce.

Italy Training 'Older Classes' as Warning to France

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, Jan. 24.—Authoritative Italian quarters announced today that "certain classes of older men" have been called up "for the usual training."

No indication of how many classes have been called was given, nor whether entire classes have been called or not. A full class amounts to about 200,000 men.

Some foreign military observers believe the action is intended to discourage France from intervening in Spain. Germany is also calling up "hitherto untrained men," for special courses.

Men holding officers' rank have been warned for service in Spain, but there are no reports of large bodies of men being sent to Spain. However, there can be little doubt that if France does intervene in Spain, large numbers of men will be available to be thrown into the peninsula at a few hours notice.

6th U. S. Note Given Nazis on Status Of American Jews

Berlin, Jan. 24 (AP).—The United States Embassy awaited a reply tonight to the sixth note Washington has sent the German government concerning the status of American Jews under rigid Nazi anti-Semitic laws.

Assurances were requested from Germany that United States citizens would not be affected by a decree prohibiting Jewish veterinarians from practicing and limiting the practice of Jewish dentists and druggists to Jewish patients and institutions.

Epic Of Fortitude

Stronger than the strongest mechanism devised by men is man's own unquenchable spirit. That is the lesson of the Cavalier.

The Cavalier was a very modern flying boat. It was equipped with all the ingenious devices that have brought the art of flying to its present remarkable level. Compared with this winged mechanism, capable of traversing land and sea with the speed of the wind, man appeared a frail and puny creature indeed. And yet, when the test came, it was the mechanism that failed and man that triumphed.

Precisely what it was that forced the Cavalier to crash in the Caribbean and quickly to sink beneath the waters of the Gulf Stream is not yet fully established. The consensus of opinion seems to be that, for still undetermined reasons, the engine gave out and the force needed to keep those tons of metal in the air was no longer availablle. The law of gravity could no longer be defied and the Cavalier, which had been breezing along at a magnificent speed, became so much dead weight. What had been, for the passengers, a luxury trip in sumptuous surroundings became a struggle for survival under harrowing circumstances.

It was then and during the next ten fearful hours that the far greater strength of the human spirit came to the fore. From the first crew and passengers acted with utmost calm. They did not falter. They did not give way to fits of despair. They acted not as frantic individuals manifesting a devil-take-the-hindmost spirit but as a community which realized that the fate of one is intertwined with the fate of all. They shared the lifebelts. They sought to cheer each other and not even the fact that two ships passed by without seeing them destroyed their courage. They even sang and it was their song, tuneless and pitiful as it was after 10 hours of drifting, that attracted the rescuers from the Esso Baytown.

At all times, such an epic of fortitude and co-operation would be heartening. But at no time does the world need the lesson of the Cavalier more than at present.

Modern No Man's Land

Frank discussion of the so-called "no man's land" in housing has been too long avoided. Washington is indebted to its Housing Association for bringing that pertinent question out into the open. No solution emerged from Monday night's forum, but a recognition of facts is a good first step toward corrective measures.

This "no man's land" exists because the United States Housing Authority has restricted projects on which it makes loans to families earning less than $1,100 per year. Private industry, on the other hand, cannot provide good, new housing in Washington for families earning less than about $2,000. Use of that figure may be arbitrary. But the announcement recently of a new FHA project in Arlington County illustrates the inability of private enterprise, even with Government-guaranteed mortgages, to provide housing for families in the upper brackets of the low-income group. This project, said to be the lowest-cost, high-class private housing development in the United States, will provide apartments at an average rent of $10 per room.

How are modern living quarters to be provided for families earning too little to pay this rental and too much to be accommodated in USHA projects? Present indications are that if private industry builds for this group, it will simply create new slums. It would be thoroughly illogical, as John Ihlder, of the Alley Dwelling Authority, pointed out, to "visualize a future in which there will be a stratum of mediocre housing—or worse—between good public housing for the poor and good private housing for the well-to-do."

It may be found desirable, therefore, to raise the income limitation for eligibility to USHA projects. Leon Keyserling, deputy administrator of the USHA, argued against that course, declaring that the Government's first problem is to "help those who need it most." His argument would be more impressive if the USHA were accommodating the very lowest-income group—those on relief. But, with minor exceptions, it is not. Local projects financed by the USHA are designed for families with low but steady incomes.

There are two strong arguments for relaxing USHA limitations on income groups to be accommodated by public housing. That policy would be socially more desirable, since it would not result in grouping "the poor" into a few well-defined housing developments. And it would permit a reduction of subsidies which are now so heavy as to jeopardize continuation of the slum-clearance and public housing program as a long-range activity.

Another Munich

With the general logic of Henry L. Stimson's public statement, urging that the embargo on the shipment of munitions to Spain "should be at once lifted by the President," it is impossible to take exception. Unfortunately it is almost equally impossible to expect that such a step will actually be authorized now.

Confining his consideration solely to the interests of the United States, the former Secretary of State emphasizes the unprecedented character of the favoritism which this country has shown to Gen. Franco. In violation of all our traditions, and to the direct encouragement of fascist movements in Latin America, we have tacitly supported a rebellion and denied a friendly government basic rights which we helped to formulate and have heretofore always upheld as an essential part of international law.

The real excuse for this "complete reversal of the pre-existing law and practice" was washed out long ago. In following the British lead for nonintervention, and thereby encouraging France to do the same, it was assumed that the effort to prevent outside interference in the Spanish civil war would be successful. Perhaps it might have been, had the United States moved a finger to support the Anglo-French effort at London. But having scuttled established American policy toward rebellion against a recognized government, the Administration took no steps to achieve the end for which this sacrifice was made. Not even a mess of pottage has been collected for the birthright which we have tossed away.

As Franco's troops, supported by thousands of Italian regulars, close in on Barcelona the implications of the American policy become more clear. It has been of material importance in furthering a triumph for the dictatorships at least as significant as that of Munich. There, Hitler forced Great Britain and France to acquiesce in the total destruction of the Versailles Treaty. Throughout in Spain it is Mussolini who has been forcing the United States to "violate our own historic policy," under what is essentially the same form of pressure.

Of course it is not merely the activities of the Berlin-Rome axis which have pushed the Administration into so pusillanimous a position in the Spanish crisis. A very important section of American opinion has from the outset supported Franco's rebellion, much as influential elements in Great Britain and France came to favor the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia. That those Americans who have so ardently indorsed the nationalist cause have moral justification for their attitude is unquestionable. Those who think in particularist terms can readily select evidence which will make either side in Spain look black as the ace of spades. The important point stressed by Mr. Stimson is that in all his ideological debate certain fundamental American interests have been completely lost to sight.

This is a serious indictment. It further illustrates the enormous advantage of the dictatorships, where no consideration other than national interest can even be voiced, over the conflicting and often totally irrelevant arguments which by their very sound and fury tend to emasculate democracies. In round after round the more developed form of government has been going down before the mailed fist, the concentrated power shrewdly focused, of the totalitarian states. And there is no reason to suppose that the current victory of fascism in Spain is final.

For the United States, on the contrary, it is more nearly the opening than the ending of the battle. Spain under fascist influence is for this country a more serious concern than Czecho-Slovakia under Hitler's thumb. The latter development, being more sudden, was perhaps more temporarily shocking to most Americans. But as between the decisions at Munich and at Barcelona the latter, for the United States, is more fundamentally alarming.

Plus White And Blue

Even as a leopard cannot change his spots, so a Communist does not cease being a Red by adding white and blue to his political habiliments. But the change of costume is nonetheless amusing.

Not many years ago all Communists took the position that any expansion of America's defense forces reflected a capitalist conspiracy instigated by munitions makers or international bankers and definitely directed against the Soviet Union. Now, no one is more anathema to the Reds than one who argues that the United States need not double its military, naval and air establishment overnight.

One such unfortunate individual is now castigated by the Daily Worker, a sprightly Communist organ, as having "joined the Fascist chorus of assault on President Roosevelt's program of national defense against the Fascist war menace." No Navy Leaguer of former days, no big army man, is now so enthusiastic an advocate of defense—or so vehement a name-caller of those who have their doubts of the President's program—as our professional Reds.

They who once regarded patriotism as a bourgeois aberration now shout their love of country from every rooftop. But is still remains obvious that the country they are most concerned about is not the U. S. A., but the U. S. S. R.

Partisan Administration

Just as the debate on confirmation of Harry L. Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce largely ignored the actual position to which he had been appointed, so the final vote on the issue tended to conceal the direction of the Senate's thinking. It was Mr. Hopkins' record as administrator of the WPA which held the attention of the Senate for almost a week. After that body had manifested its very decided lack of confidence in the present relief set-up, it voted by more than 2-to-1 for confirmation of the new Cabinet member.

A sharp distinction was drawn between Senatorial judgment as to the wisdom of the appointment and the willingness of Senators to let the President choose his own official family. Senator Glass, for example, would not vote against Mr. Hopkins because he thinks the President should have "the widest possible latitude in selecting his advisers." At the same time this veteran legislator would not vote for the nominee because that act might have been misinterpreted as indorsement of policies he thoroughly disapproves.

There was general agreement when the debate began that Mr. Hopkins would be confirmed. His critics had no real hope of dislodging him. Rather they took advantage of the occasion to protest vigorously against various policies of the Administration. Mr. Hopkins became a center of attack because he is a symbol of the loose and reckless administrative practice which has characterized much of the New Deal.

That issue is obviously far more important than the political fate of any individual. Even Senator Norris, who warmly defended Mr. Hopkins, deplored the growing partisanship in the administration of far-flung national programs. The Government has undertaken numerous tasks that call for expert administration entirely devoid of politics. Yet it has shown astonishingly little regard for expert qualifications in staffing many of these agencies. Even while the Senate was debating the Hopkins confirmation, the President continued to reward "lame ducks" with positions that should be granted only to trained technicians.

This tendency must appear particularly ironical to Senator Norris, author of the so-called "lame-duck" amendment to the Constitution. As a result of that constructive reform Congressmen no longer come back to Washington and help to enact legislation after they have been repudiated at the polls. Congress thus becomes more democratic—more responsive to the will of the people. That gain is more than offset, however, when "lame-ducks" ousted from their legislative positions are rewarded with long-term administrative or judicial posts for which their only apparent qualification is political loyalty to the President.

President Roosevelt has just asked Congress to reorganize the Federal Communications Commission. If he has taken the trouble to look beneath the surface of FCC squabbles, he knows that its chief difficulties stem from the fact that it is politics-ridden. Yet the President continues to let politics dictate his appointments to such vital agencies as the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Federal district courts.

The Senate's protest against Harry Hopkins is a symptom of growing resentment against misuse of vital Government posts as political plums. If the President is wise, he will give more heed to the warning in the Senate's debate than to his dubious victory in the Senate's vote.

He Chooses To Run

James A. McGowan, an octogenarian of Butler County, Pa., combines the vocations of farmer and auctioneer and (he asserts) the political philosophies of Jefferson and Jackson. He has been many times a candidate for office and many times defeated. At his age a lesser man might rest on laurels achieved. But Mr. McGowan has now announced his candidacy for County Commissioner in the primary election to be held next September.

Obviously this Mr. McGowan is the kind of youth that soon or late must be served, the species of early bird who must eventually turn up the worm if proverbs have any validity. The kind of hope that springs eternal in the breast of Mr. McGowan cannot always spring in vain.

But Mr. McGowan's campaign cards say that he desires one term only. That is unworthy of a young man of 80. One hopes that what he really means is that one term will serve to lead to greener pastures. Onward and upward is the motto of youth. One of these days Washington, the home of many a defeated candidate, may yet welcome Mr. McGowan in style befitting both the vigor of his spirit and the dignity of his years.

Readers Debate Spanish Problem

The Gathering Stampede

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson's column of January 23 exhibits in full swing the gathering stampede to get our country lined up for a war in which communism (in this country) has everything to win and far less to risk. Of those clamoring for the lifting of the munitions embargo, probably a very small proportion really desire such a war. How are they deceived?

By the natural tendency to oversimplify the nature of the existing developments toward world crisis. Communism is left out of account as a problem that can be dealt with later—the Reds, perhaps, can be outwitted, or even humanized—it is impolitic just now to offend them, as we may need them as allies—Nazi-Fascism is the only peril that counts now, look at Hitler's gains toward the east—look at the propaganda on Latin America. It is easier to concentrate upon the more obvious of the two outstanding world menaces in social reorganization.

It is all very plausible. The Reds, hiding behind the skirts of the liberal democracies, contribute to this simplification. And the strength of Nazi-Fascism grows by leaps and bounds because of the deceptive simplification of the issue, communism appearing as the inevitable outcome of democracy. So long as liberals think of the anti-communism of the "fascist" counter-revolutions as a mere pretext and pretense, they only strengthen the Nazi-Fascist estimate of the feebleness of the democracies.

The whole aspect of the situation changes as soon as we remove the blinders that conceal the nature of the Marxist menace and face the fact that the totalitarian nationalisms originated in a revulsion from it. The democracies are caught in the snare of their inability thus far to cope with an internal virus of economic distress, plus a systematic counsel of desperation which has been propagated for more than half a century. Unless they can cope with this virus and this desperation, what hope have the liberal democracies to fight successfully for freedom?

The munitions embargo may have certain defects were it considered as a permanent measure. But whatever its defects, it registers the American conviction that America has no stake in any totalitarianism, whether Red, black or brown. If it were lifted now, under pressure of the stampede represented in part by Miss Thompson's views, the action could only intensify conflict in Europe by strengthening the "Leftists" and making it practically certain that if we were drawn into a war it would be on the side of the Leftists.

If we by our own act are pushed into war before we are convinced it is our war, our Government will have to exercise an unprecedented cruelty toward unconvinced minorities, no matter how loyal their war conduct, because of the effect upon war morale of their unconvinced consciences. And in the end, the coercion will probably be in vain.

These are things which can be said now. Hence they should be said now. The time may come when they cannot be said, read or heard, and yet may be just as true then as they are now.

W. M. GAMBLE.

Franco's Philosophy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I quite agree with the Reverend Mr. W. H. Russell that Franco should not be portrayed as a heartless and cruel monster. There are other more important measurements by which we should judge the Caudillo—his political philosophy. In July, 1937, he said to a special correspondent of the United Press, when asked regarding the form of the state he planned for Spain: "It will follow the structure of the totalitarian regimes, like Italy and Germany. It will take on corporative forms, for which the greater part are already found in our country, and it will destroy the liberal institutions which have poisoned the people."

When asked regarding the practicability of a democratic republic in Spain he said to the correspondent of the Liverpoo' Daily Post on July 14, 1937: "We not only consider the republican regime of democratic parliamentarism impracticable in Spain, but also in other countries, as for example, in England . . ." Again in May, 1938, he said to Armando Boaventura (his statement was later published in the Lisbon newspaper O'Secula) that Spain would follow the example of Portugal, "conquering in a great hard and bloody war the common enemy—Asiatic bolshevism and all its allies: democracy, liberalism and Masonry."

Favorable Comment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If not too late I would like to express our appreciation of your editorial of January 15 on the Spanish situation. Ever since it appeared I have been hoping to find time to tell you that we have heard more favorable comment on this than on any other recent editorial.

It is a question of such vital importance to the future of democracy in America that we are writing to commend you for this able editorial.

A Rotten Business

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If this country lifted the embargo and shipped arms to the loyalists, from the rebel point of view we would be giving aid to their enemy and it is only reasonable to believe and foresee that Franco would make every effort to prevent the arms reaching Spain and the loyalists. He would be justified in doing so, and a military fool if he didn't.

The result would be difficulty in maintaining freedom of the seas and those parties owning or operating the ships would demand protection from the United States Government to insure that freedom. But there is a state of war existing in Spain and however righteous may be thought the cause we would be in jeopardy of attack from the weapons of defense of the rebels. Those who demand the lifting of the embargo, let them undertake the hazard of shipping arms to the loyalists in ships financed by the organizations who claim to be friends of loyalist Spain. And when the rebels attack the shipment, let the friends refrain from calling upon the U. S. Government to help them. That wouldn't do at all; they want America to do it and they not assume any of the risk. We heard that noise before the World War, which was the greatest factor in getting us embroiled in that conflict. Let us also look at the situation from this angle.

The Republic of Spain was set up after the royal government of Alfonso was overthrown by the Reds and Soviets—a government of Communists and Reds. They are now the loyalists. So lifting the embargo to sell armament to the loyalists is simply helping communism defeat fascism. An between the two "isms" America has no favorites, both being diametrically opposed to our form of government.

There is then no reason why America should expose herself to possible warfare, and its horrible concomitants, just to appease the selfish desire of the communists and affiliated organizations, "trailers," and Reds who want only to Sovietize the United States.

Let the "isms" level each other off. We Americans want no part in any of the rotten business of the struggle between communism and fascism.

ROSWELL P. WALDO.

Appreciation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is merely a subscriber's feeling of appreciation for your editorial demand for the lifting of the Spanish embargo. I hope you will continue to hammer home different aspects of why the embargo contradicts the democratic claims of our foreign policy. VAL R. LORWIN.
Washington, Jan. 20.

The Peaceful Way

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson and many peace workers yesterday were advocating the settlement of the Spanish rebellion by war rather than by pacific methods. The peaceful way is not only the legal, political and moral obligation of the United States, but it is our solemn duty to Almighty God.

Why should not each side agree to have the dispute settled by conference? The result will be a reunited Spain, with Roman Catholics in the majority, with justice for the workers, with freedom of the press and with freedom of worship for the Protestants, Jews, Mohammedans and Roman Catholics!

The International Munitions Trust seems to have succeeded in dividing each religious group, the Protestants, the Roman Catholics and the Jews into two sects, so that one sect believes in settling war by military power and the other by peaceful means only, as was promised by the Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact, which was proposed by the United States to the world in 1929 and has been solemnly signed by all nations. That President Roosevelt referred Hitler to it last fall proves its validity.

The neutrality act of 1937 was a futile attempt to settle the new scientific kind of war in an old-fashioned way.

On Christmas Eve, President Roosevelt pledged himself not only to this nation but the whole world, to use all the power that in him lies to establish an era of world peace.

By calling a conference of all nations, without waiting for the passage of Congressman U. S. Guyer's Joint Resolution No. 7, to be held in America during the World's Fair, our President will keep his own Christmas Eve pledge and the promise of America to the world, made when our Senate, with only one dissenting vote, enacted the Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact and offered it in 1929 to all nations. All nations have solemnly accepted it.

WILLIAM SHEAFE CHASE,
President, Religious Union for World Peace.
Washington, Jan. 24.

Commendation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to commend you on your sane and courageous editorial policy supporting the lifting of the embargo on loyalist Spain. I hope you are successful before it is too late—it is to the interests of the United States that you be. HARRY I. RAND.

Fears For U. S.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are a number of us who do not like to write letters and who do not know how to express ourselves, who still want to let you know that we appreciate your editorial of January 15 about Franco and Spain.

If Franco wins, terrible things will happen in the world and will affect our land. We all hope that you will continue your straightforward stand on what is happening in Spain and show the people in our Capital the importance of Fascist aggression in Spain and the unhappiness it means to us.

The Post Impressionist

The Palmer Button

ONE OF THESE days, when the pressure of public opinion becomes too much for me, I'm going to drop into an elementary school and brush up a little on my penmanship. To a fellow who once qualified as a penman, constant ridicule of his handwriting can get pretty annoying.

Every time someone jibes too loudly at my scrawl, I think back with satisfaction to the day when I won my Palmer Method button. What a day that was! And what a prize to have fought for! A blue-enameled pin, emblazoned with a hand holding a penholder, holding it lightly yet firmly, at just the right angle. Nice, all right, and I certainly had worked for it.

In fact, I'd worked five years for it. You see, it was the pin customarily given to fourth-graders. But I was in the eight grade by the time I got it.

To start at the beginning, I was born with faulty muscular coordination and almost no sense of symmetry. These were lacks which bothered me little during my early years. You can't have everything, I figured, and let it go at that. Later, when I started school, I saw that I was in for a lot of trouble.

But when the trouble came, it came without warning. One bright afternoon in early autumn, when I was immersed in my regular brown study, or reverie, the first-grade teacher said, "Now, children, I want you all to open your primers and copy the first page, the way I have shown you." Her voice, I remember, was as sweet and clear and unwelcome as a bugle blaring reveille on a frosty morning.

Well, here I was, squarely up against the unexpected. Handwriting, hey? So I had been tricked into this without being told, had I? To understand how I felt, you must know that I could already read and talk and felt that man wanted little else here below. Moreover, I didn't remember having been taught anything about this obviously useless accomplishment.

Although the desks were intended for two occupants, I was alone in mine—the authorities apparently having decided to isolate me. However, I looked about and saw the entire first grade bent grimly over the task. "If they can do it, I can too," I said to myself, with a flash of the O'Dox spirit. So I started.

Believe it or not, I copied that first page exactly as it was in print. I reproduced each letter, accurately, if painfully and with little grace. After a while the teacher came around on a tour of inspection.

"What are you doing, Heter?" she asked in stricken tones.

"I am copying this page," I replied wtih dignity.

"Oh, but you don't do it that way," the woman said boldly. "Look, children, here is a boy who doesn't know how to write and so he has printed the entire page. That should teach us all perseverance."

That was the first lesson.

After my mother had taught me the theory of writing in a flowing script, I managed to get along reasonably well for a couple of years. It was not until I had reached the third grade that Palmer Method came into my life.

Today, after twenty-odd years of disappointment and frustration, I recognize that I should remember that initial Palmer Method day as one of sorrow and disaster. But, for a while at least, I enjoyed it. For that was the first day we used pen and ink; first and second graders always wrote with a pencil.

The first step in the daily Palmer Method course was the warm-up. With the teacher setting an animated example, each pupil held his arms straight in front of him and waggled his hands up and down from the wrist. That was supposed to relax the muscles.

Then you poised your pen over your sheet of blue-lined paper. At the word "Go," you started whirling your pen in double-space circles over the paper, trying religiously to keep in time as the teacher chanted, "One, two, three, four, One, two, three, four," always accenting the "One" as if it marked the start of the new century, which it seemed to be.

You stopped and looked at the design you had made with all that effort. Mine always looked like a jagged jet of smoke coming from a reluctant chimney.

After that you did a series of up-and-down strokes, closely put together and known as "Push-and-Pulls." The Push-and-Pulls were done in time to the same rhythmic chant. When completed, mine looked like the seismographic record of a major earthquake.

All this was just a preliminary to the real thing, the writing over and over again of capital A's and small a's, capital B's and small b's. And so on, through the alphabet. I think that the advanced students even got to writing sentences, although I never did.

On the other hand, I was never awarded the fifth or sixth grade buttons, either, not to mention the Palmer Final Certificate, that recognition of ultimate perfection with the pen.

But I did get the little blue-enameled pin with the hand on it and the detractors of my penmanship can never take that away from me. HETER O'DOX.

Nazi Orations

IF YOU WERE to substitute the terms "International Nazi" for "International Jew" and "World Nazidom" for "World Jewry" in many of the orations and writings which have come out of Germany these last few days and examine the attitude of the Nazi nation it would be clearly seen that the Nazi campaign closely follows the lines of the plot which the Nazis themselves attribute to the Jews.

There occurs in this material the same arrogant assumption of superiority and the same contempt for the rights and qualities of other peoples that the Nazis constantly impute to the Jews and denounce as a menace and insult. They hold themselves to be God's chosen people, with a private god of their own who detests all other peoples and rewards all acts which serve world Nazidom at the expense of the infidels of whatever race or nation.

THAT IS the substance of one of their complaints against the Jews, and, having brooded on the case, they apparently were impressed by the merits of such a conspiracy if pressed with ruthless energy in their own interest. The most aggressive Nazi thought on the subject of religion goes so far as to claim that a Nazi is himself divine, because the Nazi god is the state.

By this process every faithful Nazi becomes a part of that god.

The international Nazi is permitted to take citizenship in this and other countries which will permit him to do so, but he is expected to remain faithful to Hitler and exhorted to create unrest among Americans of German blood, even as the Jews are accused of fomenting class warfare.

"NATION AND State are not identical," says an item in a collection of Nazi papers on this subject contained in a book called "The German Reich and Americans of German Origin," published by the Oxford Press. "We sometimes have believed that only those belong to the Reich who live within the borders of the Reich, within the German state. We have assumed that nation and state were identical. What would become of those who have gone to foreign countries in former years because of economic necessity and lust for adventure" They are, nationally speaking, our brothers, our racial comrades, even if they possess American citizenship. Folkdom is much greater than citizenship in a country. Therefore, we rightfully define as Germans all those of German descent and of German blood who live abroad."

The material is old and familiar, but the book serves as a handy collection. The reflection on the American patriotism of immigrants and the descendants of immigrants is characteristic of the Nazi attitude on the subject, since it was decided that by Nazifying all emigrants and their descendants the Hitler state would increase its numbers by millions and establish powerful outposts abroad.

"AND THUS I come to the main accusation raised against the foreign organization and its party comrades abroad," said E. W. Bohle, the leader of the Nazi foreign organization, in a speech to the party congress at Nuremberg in 1935—"that we are causing unrest in the German colonies and destroying their unity. If fight means unrest, then we admit that we created unrest. We fought to win the Germans abroad."

Americans of German blood and descent make their own answer to this attitude toward their citizenship and American patriotism. There has been violent disagreement in cultural organizations here over the efforts of the Nazi missionaries to make international Nazis of American citizens, and the insulting program has made little progress, thanks to the resentment of those whom it intended to win to treacherous activity.

Still, examination of the Nazi declarations on the subject shows that the intention is to persuade decent American citizens, most of them natives and many ex-soldiers who fought against the Kaiser, to become international Nazis and betray their country in the manner which the Nazi propaganda constantly charges against the Americans of Jewish faith or blood.

ALL NAZI writings on the subject are alive with reminders that the Nazi is the superior of all other men and that the service of Nazidom justifies any betrayal of oath or trust, a common Nazi charge against the figure described as the "International Jew." Their documents hold that such conduct is permissible, even holy, and sure to be rewarded by the Nazi god in the Nazi heaven. It seems a serious possibility that some genius of the Reich, on examining the Nazi propaganda against the so-called "International Jews," went to Hitler saying, "Boss, this is too good to waste. It was a perfect plan. Let us use it ourselves."

3 Firms Ordered To Cease Price Discriminations

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday it had ordered the American Optical Co., of Southbridge, Mass., and Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., of Rochester, N. Y., to stop price discriminations.

The commission also ordered the Carter Carburetor Corporation, St. Louis, to cease granting preferential prices to retail dealers on the condition that they do not deal in a competitor's product.

Ecuador's Problems

By Elizabeth Shirley Enochs

Expectantly Awaits New Congress

Quito, Ecuador.

LOUDSPEAKERS are being installed in the most congested sections of the city of Quito so that the debates of the new Ecuadorian Congress, which is to meet February 1, may be followed by the greatest possible number of people. This is an indication of the intense expectancy prevailing in the capital of a country which has had three Presidents in the last eight months, and in which the last Congress was dissolved after having drawn up a new constitution, the terms of which have remained a mystery until the last few days.

The terms of the new constitution reveal another paradox: Ecuador is being governed by a fundamental charter of leftist tendencies at a time when the country appears to be veering if not to the right at least more heavily toward the center.

For the past weeks the three political parties—the Socialists, the Liberal-Radicals and the Conservatives—have been drawing up lists of candidates, but the general public has viewed this activity with something akin to apathy. Events of the last year have helped to intensify a growing sense of discouragement and lack of confidence on the part of many leading Ecuadoreans. Alleviation of some of the causes of this spirit of defeatism will be one of the most important tasks awaiting the new congress when it convenes.

OVERSHADOWING even the serious economic situation at the present time, is the status of the negotiations with Peru over the boundary problem.

Ecuador had consented to participate in the Eighth International Conference of American States in Lima despite the fact that the boundary negotiations with Peru had previously been broken off, in order that the action of the American republics might be truly unanimous.

A delegation of great ability was sent to Lima under the chairmanship of Dr. Julio Tobar Donoso, chancellor of the republic, who co-operated most generously in the work of the conference. During the critical stage of the conference, when votes on the solidarity declaration were being closely counted, the Argentine delegation had listed the vote of Ecuador as doubtful. But Donoso went to the President of the conference, Foreign Minister Carlos Concha, of Peru, and told him that he could count on the Ecuadorean vote—an example of solidarity which surprised some of the other nations.

After the signing of the final act, the Ecuadorean delegation remained in Peru for informal conferences with the officials of the foreign office in the hope of being able to take back to Quito some reassuring word in regard to reopening of negotiations on the boundary dispute. The Peruvian government apparently feared that an immediate agreement to reopen negotiations would give the impression that Ecuador's attendance at the conference had been the result of a barter. Dr. Donoso therefore returned to Ecuador with no formal pledge of an early resumption of discussions between the two governments but not without hope that they will be resumed in the future.

Meanwhile, public opinion in Ecuador is bitterly disappointed and the comment that "Ecuador got nothing out of the Lima conference" is heard on many sides. The trend of opinion is reflected in such slogans as "We are Ecuadoreans and we will win" chalked on walls on the streets of Quito.

THE FAILURE to reach an agreement on this difficult question is due to many factors, one of which undoubtedly is Peru's fear of an unfavorable reaction of public opinion of a settlement ceding territory to Equador. Peru has gone far in recent years in the settlement of boundary disputes. But in each of these settlements, the most recent of which was that concerning Leticia, Peru has given up territory.

The controversy with Colombia is still so fresh in the public mind that the Peruvian government cannot view without a certain amount of apprehension the possible effect of a settlement favorable to Ecuador. In addition to this, the unsettled political situation in Ecuador, the recent leftist trend in that country and its adoption of the Mexican labor code are viewed with alarm in conservative Peru and have not increased the chances of cordial co-operation between the two countries. In Peru the outcome of the Ecuadorean elections and the attitude of the new Ecuadorean Congress are being followed with more than ordinary interest—an interest which has been further heightened by the recent change of government in Chile.

But while the boundary dispute is a burning question in Ecuador, the fundamental problem with which the new Congress will have to deal is an economic one.

Few countries in South America are more beautiful, more fertile, richer in resources of a widely varying nature than Ecuador. Few countries have suffered more as a result of the world economic crisis. The recent import control regulations formulated by the Central Bank of Ecuador represent the latest of a series of such regulations drawn up for the purpose of remedying the unfavorable trade balance of the country.

THE REASONS underlying this unfavorable trade balance and the depreciation of the currency are multiple and complex. Actually, according to some of the leading Ecuadorean economists, the import control regulations have had little effect—except to increase the amount of imports immediately preceding the date on which they were to go into effect and immediately after they have been relaxed.

The same economists point to barter practices with European nations as another factor reacting unfavorably on the national economy. Germany, for instance, buys the greater portion of Ecuador's leading crop, cocoa, and, instead of paying for it in gold, as in the past, now pays in compensation marks which must be applied to the purchase of goods imported to Ecuador from Germany.

In 1938 the income from cocoa production was but 70 per cent of that of the previous year and about one-third of that of the years before the depression. To offset the diminished income from cocoa, Ecuador has been trying to export more coffee, but the price levels set by Brazil have decreased Ecuador's income from this source.

Ecuadoreans admit the need of capital for development of the country's resources, but are apprehensive of the results of large foreign investments. Foreign capital, on the other hand, is wary of investment in Ecuador while political conditions are unstable. The adoption of Mexican labor code—which conservative Ecuadoreans deplore as being totally unsuited to conditions in their country—is not reassuring to foreign investors at the present time.

Since the pact of Munich, however, there are indications that Ecuadorean capital, which has been emigrating in recent years, is beginning to flow back into the country. Ecuadoreans who have been living abroad are returning home and seem to feel that however unstable conditions may have been in their own country, they are far better than they are anywhere in Europe today. This is one of the hopeful elements in the present picture not only in Ecuador but in many other nations of Latin America.

President Mosquera Narvaez indicated that the program of his government will place great emphasis on education and on efforts to solve the country's social and economic problems. An ambitious project for the extension and development of primary, secondary and normal schools has been announced, with insistence upon practical education. "We have been training too many orators and men of letters," President Mosquera declares, "whereas this is the day of social and economic problems."

These are some of the problems which will be debated by the new Congress of Ecuador and by the citizens gathered round the loudspeakers recently installed in the streets of Quito.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Ten Minutes—And A Check

WHEN YOU WENT into the little boy's bedroom that morning, he complained that he "felt horrid." His pupils were dilated; his cheeks flushed. "I vomited," he said. And the thermometer showed a temperature of 105 degrees. "I ache," he said. And when you asked where, he said, "all over." "And my head hurts," he added.

When the doctor came he went over him very carefully. "Put your head on your chest, son," he said. "I can't very well," said the little boy, "my neck hurts."

And then that wild, wild fear. "Why do you ask him to do that, Doctor? What are you afraid of? What does it mean?" Questions rushing past your lips. All the time your mind saying, "Now don't be hysterical. Now don't get excited. Don't show the child you are alarmed."

But there were cases . . . cases in the next village . . . the papers reported them. You hadn't let the boy go to town during the last week—kept him away from the "movies" because of those cases.

THE DOCTOR was noncommittal. Your mind recalled what you had read in the medical books—the books for laymen with which you were familiar. Fever. General malaise. Sometimes vomiting. Severe headaches. Stiff neck. All the rest came very soon.

All the rest! He was like Mercury, your boy. "He doesn't walk, he always runs," you had said proudly. The phrase leaped into your mind. Beyond that you did not dare to think.

The boy looked at the doctor questioningly. "I'm not very sick," he asserted, and watched for an answer. "No, indeed, you are just fine; just need a little time in bed," said the doctor.

He was lying. You could see as plain as day that he was lying.

THE DOCTOR left the room and his eyes beckoned you to follow him. In a few seconds you would know it. In a few seconds you would know what you already knew, only you would not let yourself think it! You were praying in that inchoate wordless way that people do. "Please don't let it be Please . . . If you don't let it be, I won't ever complain about anything." You were wondering why anything, ever, had ever bothered you—money, or the state of the world, or—anything.

Now, the doctor was saying it. There was just one more second before everything would become dark. You were holding your face composed. Holding it from opening and screaming. The doctor was saying it. "I'm afraid I have bad news for you." It was out. That was what it was. You had known it all along. "Your boy has pneumonia."

Pneumonia! Pneumonia! Did you ever, ever think that a great wave of relief would sweep over you, that almost a song would sing in your heart because a doctor told you your boy had pneumonia! There were serums for pneumonia; good nursing; he was a healthy boy; he had good lungs and a sound heart. Oxygen tents, if it came to the worst. He had pneumonia. With pneumonia he had a chance—a chance of total permanent recovery.

It wasn't infantile paralysis!

IF YOU HAVE EVER even thought, for just ten minutes, that your child might have infantile paralysis you will sit down and send a check to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

If you are capable of imagining what it means to have a child stricken with infantile paralysis, you will sit down and send a check to the fund.

If you have money enough to afford an occasional "movie," you will sacrifice a few hours of recreation and send the cost of a couple of tickets, if you cannot afford more.

Some of the worst children's diseases have been conquered by science.

The mortality from diphtheria has been radically reduced because of the Schick test and the preventive innoculations which have been discovered. The ravages of whooping cough have been reduced by modern methods of treatment; children and adults are not swept away by smallpox any more. We seem on the verge of finding a true preventive against measles, which is a far more ravaging disease than is commonly supposed because of the aftereffects if the small patient is not carefully nursed.

BUT WE STILL know almost nothing about the cause of infantile paralysis. Science has not been able to isolate the bacillus; physicians believe that it is a filterable virus—so small, that is to say, that it passes through a biological filter. There is some reason to believe that spraying children's noses with certain zinc solutions makes them less susceptible to infection, although, I believe, that is not clearly established.

Treatments during the disease with serum from convalescant patients have mitigated its evil effects. Draining of the spinal column and the use of a saline solution has occasionally halted the disease.

And a therapy of treating victims exists and is constantly being perfected.

Because of that treatment many victims are only slightly crippled who would otherwise be maimed and twisted beyond hope of any normal life.

There is still nothing like sufficient distribution of equipment for dealing with the disease.

There is still totally insufficient equipment for the rehabilitation of the victims.

There is still insufficient money for research into the cause, from which we may yet hope to find a true preventive and a sure cure.

THERE ARE 350,000 cripples in this country due to infantile paralysis. A survey in a small Midwestern town revealed that a quarter of all major orthopedic impairments were due to this disease.

It is wanton in its attacks. The strongest, healthiest, brightest children seem, if anything, the more susceptible.

It is the constant terror of every parent. And every parent or prospective parent ought to give his or her contribution, however small, to aid the fight against the children's enemy.

Having said all this: "Inclosed find check." I halt writing this column to write my name on a small oblong piece of paper and address it to my colleague, Gen. Johnson, chairman of the Greater New York Committee for Infantile Paralysis, 17 East Forty-second street, New York. The National Headquarters, also eager for checks, is at 50 East Forty-second street.

Fifty per cent of whatever money you send in goes right back to your own local community to take care of victims there. The rest helps the Nation-wide fight.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Weather And The Dictators

A cycle of hot weather is responsible for dictators and world dissension, says Dr. Raymond H. Wheeler, of the University of Kansas, who says both will disappear with a cold cycle which is not far away. The professor shows charts to prove that through the ages there has been a relationship between weather and trends in civilization.

It seems logical. For example, what happens to a man in hot weather? He wants to go swimming all the time. If he can't go swimming all the time what happens? He gets irritable. He gets jealous of people who can. He feels the urge to control swimming and bar certain classes from the beaches. Thus is born the dictator complex.

Or take another type. Maybe his passion in hot weather is for an ice cream cone. He orders vanilla and gets strawberry. Then he is charged 15 cents when it is plain that it is just a nickel cone. This makes him fighting mad and he wants to start a war on capitalism. By this time (especially if the weather gets any hotter) he feels a definite dictator urge.

Take a man who during a heat wave gets into his car for a week-end tour with the family. He may be a kind, contented, reasonable man when he starts out, but after a few of those Sunday afternoon traffic jams, what? He begins to hate everybody. It's just a step from that to the dictator mood. Stalin, Mussolini, Hitler—maybe what started them as trouble makers was the search for a parking space on a hot Saturday.

Now on the other hand, what happens in a cold-weather cycle? Nothing. The world is safe from disturbers. You can't hate anybody when it's down around 20 above. You're too busy tending the furnace.

All you want is to sit around the stove and listen to Amos and Andy. Once a man gets into a cozy chair in front of a fire he wouldn't take a war if you gave it to him.

What's more, when it's cold he gets into his long underwear, doesn't he? Of course. And nobody in long underwear ever wanted to overthrow governments, lead an army, tear up covenants, denounce sister states or raise hell generally.

Can You Do It Yet?

A most amazing mental case
Is Luther Otis Waite:
He dates checks 1939
And never '38!

A radio without static has been perfected. The terrible part of it is that you can listen to orators without interruption.

Bruce Barton says he can't understand why the New Deal doesn't propose to change the course of the Gulf Stream. It has, Bruce. Haven't you noticed how much hotter it is for everybody since the Democrats got into power?

Back Home Stuff

The New Haven road has filed an amendment to its reorganization plan, proposing to make the common stock worthless. "There appears to be no equity behind it," says the proposal. Well, it just doesn't seem possible. Why, back home New Haven road was for generations a "gilt edge" security. Everybody with any money had the common in the strong box. When anybody died folks always wondered how much "New Haven" he left to the widow and children.

It was between 200 and 300 for years, and, as a boy, we wished we could save enough to buy one share. We felt it would give us that substantial feeling.

New Haven was riding high in those days and wasn't worrying about anything. And now "no equity behind the common," eh? Bosh! We're just dreaming.

Books and Things

By Lewis Gannett

Log-Cabin Life

CEDAR FALLS, IOWA, is 8 miles from Waterloo, which is larger, and since 1855 has been the county seat of Black Hawk County. In Waterloo, which is big and brash, they will tell you proudly that Harold Sinclair Lewis worked on the Courier back in 1908-1909. But in Cedar Falls they boast that Bess Streeter Aldrich was born there, and went to school in the State Teachers College, which was known as a normal school in those days, and had once been a "female seminary."

Bess Streeter Aldrich's "Song of Years" (Appleton, $2.50) is a tale of prairie love and of the ancient rivalries between Cedar Falls and Waterloo, easily identifiable, though she faintly disguises them behind the names they bore before they were "platted"—Sturgis Falls and Prairie Rapids. And it is as homey and teary and cheery, as full of feasts of stewed prairie chicken and corn cakes, as bright with tiger lily and bluebells and shooting stars, and as staunch with rugged pioneer idealism, as any of Mrs. Aldrich's other prairie romances—"A Lantern in Her Hand," "A White Bird Flying" and the rest. It is the kind of story you can rely on, even when the news comes from Virginia that Wayne Lockwood has died of his wounds, and there seems to be no hope left, you know for certain Mrs. Aldrich will not let you down. His resuscitation is far less a miracle than would be a tragic ending for a novel by Bess Streeter Aldrich.

There's a lot of Iowa in this book. Wayne Lockwood walks all the way from Dubuque, across the Wapsicicon, to find his ideal land in the Red Cedar Valley—"a perspiring Adonis in buckskin breeches and open-necked flannel shirt there on the unsettled Iowa pairie in 1854"—in chapter one. In chapter two he outwits the rich man who tried to file on his claim ahead of him. In chapter three he dreams of a girl with a face like a white cloud. Chapter four introduces him to the seven tomboy daughters of Neighbor Martin, including the youngest Suzanne, with red-brown hair and gray-blue eyes and a voice like a meadowlark's. And you know that whatever may come between. . . .

Plenty comes between: the fight over the removal of the county seat, the first schoolbell in the State of Iowa, the winter of "the Great Quake," when the whole valley was down with chills and fever, and the Big Cold; Indian raids, and the news of the railroad bridge across the Mississippi; the panic of '37, and rumors of John Brown's raids out West in Kansas; the birth of the Republican Party and the first oil lamps; the female seminary hoopskirts and the war. And a pale girl from the South, who almost breaks little Suzanne's heart, and the news from Virginia.

Life on the frontier will, I suppose, always have for Americans something of the aura with which the Greeks surrounded the legends of their gods on Olympus. Mrs. Aldrich's story has its heroes and its villians, according to the conventional pattern; it also re-creates the well-loved picture of log-cabin life. It has a simple charm of its own.

A STRANGELY FASCINATING BOOK is "The Book of a Thousand Tongues" (Harpers, $2.50), in which Dr. Eric M. North, general secretary of the American Bible Society, gives some account of the translation and publication of all or part of the Holy Scriptures into 1,018 languages, offering facsimile of fragments of these versions, some of them in scripts even stranger than the tongues they represent.

Dr. North's pious introduction expresses his regret that the missionary spirit is slipping. So much remains to be done! The entire Bible has thus far been published in only 179 of the 1,018 languages. Three hundred thousand Sulu Moros in the Philippines still have only one Gospel in their tongue—and, though Dr. North omits to say so, few of these Moslems are interested in that. Four million Quechua Indians in the Andes, seven and one-half million Ruanda in Africa, two million Cambodians in French Indo-China still lack complete Bibles.

The industry with which Americans and Englishmen traveled to the most remote and romantic parts of the world and set to work translating the Bible into the most exotic tongues is impressive; so is the scanty record of translations into the American Indian tongues, a knowledge of which required so much less travel. Good old John Eliot, who completed his version of the Bible in the tongue of the Massachusetts Indians away back in 1663, was unique. The only other Indian tongue spoken within the United States into which the entire Bible has been put is the Dakota Sioux, begun in 1839 and finished in 1879. The Navahoes had no translation whatever until 1910, the Hopis none until 1929.

There is quaint beauty in some of these translations. The translator of the Bible into Labrador Eskimo rendered the word "forgiveness" as "issuma-vokgijaujungnainernich," which, Dr. North says, means "not-being-able-to-think-about-it-a n y-more." One wonders how much John Eliot's Massachusetts pupils got from his translation of "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirt." In Massachusetts it read: "Noh neekit wutch weyausit, weyausuoo; kah noh neekit wutch Nashauanittoit, noh nashauonganuoo." About as much, probably, as the Chinese boys and girls I once heard, in Canton, singing "Washed in the Blood of the Lamb."

Hopkins' Future

By Ernest K. Lindley

Presidential Chances Seen Slim

WHEN ALL the shouting was over, the vote on the confirmation of Harry Hopkins was close to a division on party lines. Only two Republicans voted for him—both of them agrarian progressives—and the Democratic Senators who voted against him or were excused from voting were extreme right-wingers, whose party affiliation with the Roosevelt Administration has been purely nominal.

Harry Hopkins could not expect to avoid a raking. It was more severe than it probably would have been if he had been less intimate with the President than he is and had not been advertised as the President's personal choice as his successor in the White House. Among the Senators who finally voted to confirm him were undoubtedly many who hoped that the broadsides from their colleagues had shot away everything that Mr. Hopkins carried in the way of Presidential antennae and look-out towers

HARRY HOPKINS can survive the bombardment of his Senatorial critics and the embarrassment of being compared, by Senator Neely, with Christopher Columbus and George Washington. Even as a Presidential candidate he is no worse off than he was before his appointment as Secretary of Commerce was submitted to the Senate. He has never had a chance of getting the nomination except as a hand-picked candidate of Mr. Roosevelt. To put him over, Mr. Roosevelt would have to be strong and determined enough to block the nomination of a middle-of-the-road Democrat—including perhaps such members of his own Cabinet as Cordell Hull and Jim Farley. He would have to convince all the important liberal elements in the Roosevelt coalition that Mr. Hopkins is their best bet—which many of them do not now believe. And he would have to convince the practical politicians, progressive and middle of the road, that Mr. Hopkins could be elected.

As Works Progress Administrator, Harry Hopkins had no chance whatsoever of vaulting into the Presidential nomination. As Secretary of Commerce he has a chance. At present it is such a small chance that his friends might as well forget about it. If it grows any bigger it will be because of the job he does as Secretary of Commerce.

POLITICAL reputations are more easily wrecked than remade, but there have been a few transfigurations even in the Roosevelt Administration. Three or four years ago James A. Farley was, with the possible exception of Rex Tugwell, the most battered target in the New Deal. Then it was he, not Harry Hopkins, who was supposed to be responsible for a foul streak of "politics." But from the 1936 election Mr. Farley emerged purified, his pockets bulging with indorsements from business and financial leaders. With the discovery that he is a moderately conservative fellow, that he was unenthusiastic about the Supreme Court bill, was opposed to most of the "purges," doesn't like Tommy Corcoran, and has turned thumbs down on the Presidential aspirations of Harry Hopkins, Harold Ickes and various other progressives, Jim Farley has become something of a saint to many who formerly reviled him.

Harry Hopkins starts with less of a handicap than Jim Farley had. No one is so popular with the conservatives as a progressive who has recanted. Harry Hopkins could make himself the hero of the conservatives in three months. He will have plenty of encouragement to do so. Whether he is sturdy enough to withstand the blandishments of the Right is yet to be demonstrated. He can't yield too much without losing the confidence of his liberal friends.

HE WILL HAVE to make some concessions. His job is to make the New Deal and business pull together toward economic recovery. This means making more businessmen understand what the New Deal is all about. It also means clearing away obstacles, psychological or tangible; which the New Deal has left in the way of economic recovery. It means also getting action where it has been long overdue, such as on the railroad front.

As the Department of Commerce has little authority of its own which affects business, Harry Hopkins won't be able to accomplish much without treading on the toes of other highly placed New Dealers. Thus he faces diplomatic difficulty within the Administration as well as in his contacts with businessmen. His achievements will depend largely on his capacity to convince the President. As is generally known, he is at least half a nose closer than anyone else to the President's ear.

But his success will depend on his ability to discriminate between the legitimate complaints of relatively progressive businessmen and the cries of misery from those who would be satisfied with nothing short of a return to William McKinley.

From Bismarck and Disraeli to the present-day British Conservative Party, progressive reforms have been wrought more easily by conservatives, yielding to popular pressure, than by progressives. We are now about to find out, with the aid of Harry Hopkins, whether it is easy, or even possible, for progressives, yielding to popular pressure, to make wise concessions to the conservatives.

Your Figure

Exercise Alone, Not Reducing

Calories You Burn Return if You Eat To Heartily; Dual Program Necessary

By Ida Jean Kain.

FROM THE FIRST floor to the 103rd of the Empire State Building there are 2,240 steps. If you were to limp your way to the top, you might lost half-a-pound. In this skyscraping climb—which only two people have completed—you burn around 2,000 calories and to lose one pound you have to burn 4,000. So you would have to climb twice—but you could be carried down!

Or, if you regard that as a dizzy idea, you might consider losing your pound by laying 14,731 bricks, or by putting in five hours at trotting 35 miles.

Gained Weight Dancing

A dance marathon once furnished conclusive proof that exercise alone does not reduce. Even though they danced for 18 hours a day for weeks, the over-exercised contestants gained weight. They were eating six meals a day and the calories supplied in even small portions of food is much greater than can be burned in energy.

It seems fairly evident that if you want to reduce by exercise you'll have to do it by not eating! And that does not mean you can forego exercise. It may not be reducing, but it certainly is the last word in streamlining. Taking off weight isn't everything. You want to take it off certain measurements so that your proportions will tally with these:

A bust measurement two to three inches larger than the chest; a waistline slim and trim at seven to eight inches less than the bust; a svelte hip measurement not more than 3 inches larger than the bust.

Certain Proper Exercises

Nobody seriously expects you to do anything as strenuous as climbing the Empire State Building or making a hobby of brick laying. But there are exercises which will work wonders with your measurements. They are a necessary part of your figure program.

Aside from what they do for your figure, these exercises have another function. Unless you have regular exercise while reducing, the muscular system tends to become flabby and weak, and you feel nervous and depressed. Your little 15-minute workout can prevent that. Also, it improves the tonicity of your skin and makes it easier to adjust to the smaller size.

You can't reduce by exercise, but you can't reduce without it, either! General exercises will boost your circulation, helping your musculature and skin, and a few specific ones will improve your measurements until you hardly know your own figure.

Slack Season in Resort Fashions

The three smart girls (above) look cheerfully toward a summer season of casual easy-to-wear play togs. Seen at a recent resort fashion showing at the 2400 Hotel were these prophetic play suits. The girl at left wears her natural-colored mesh shirt with blue demin slacks and a scarlet camerbund. In opposition to her flat fishnet fez is the conical shaped hat of the girl at center, for all the world like a dunce's cap. She looks loose and relaxed in navy slacks and a citron-tinted shirt, which could double for a French porter's or a man's nightshirt. The girl on the right juggles her colors, wearing blue slacks with a rose-hued shirt and beret

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Thoughts in January

(While reading the advertisements.)

Surely there are some people who do not go on Caribbean cruises,

Or am I the only one sitting home nursing my mental bruises?

Now just as I've gotten used to facing myself in this funny hat,

Must I rush out and get a worse one to prove I'm a plutocrat?

How can people have the hardihood to be buying new swim suits,

And at the same time be shivering and stomping around in snow boots?

How much longer can I hold out against the annual mid-winter temptation,

To buy a little poppy print and consign myself to style damnation?

Why do the merchants rush the seasons, make time pass so much quicker?

Before I've worn my winter clothes, for spring ones I must dicker.

Why is it that I never get organized in time or in finances,

To buy next winter's clothes at January sales and improve my circumstances?

Now what would happen—would my husband run off and join a cutie,

If I should fail to get new slip covers and give my home some beauty?

I must send off right away to get a catalogue of garden flowers,

This spring and summer in my garden, I'll spend all my waking hours.

Why must I, now that I'm prepared to face the mid-winter fray,

Be constantly reminded that old general humidity is on the way?

Of course I must admit the changing seasons have their compensations,

And this will pass and that—and screwed hair will stage an abdication.

And anyway if sumner days bring temperatures that are bako,

At least we will not have to look at any woman in a shako.

New Beach Coats Are Colorful

New York (AP).—After the swim, the thing to wear seems to be either a fitted coat that stops at the knees or a full swagger one of mid-thigh length. These are made of knitted wool or that perennial favorite—terry cloth. There are also some long fitted coats. Mauve-violet, citron (greenish yellow), turquoise, peach, white and rich blue are all beach colors to keep in mind.

Huge straw sun hats, fish-net handeaux, big bags of canvas or felt, and open-heeled, cork-soled sandals with elasticized straps across the foot make beach accessories.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 25

IT HAS been my job, of late, to interview and assay "America's Typical Customer," as chosen by the National Retail Dry Goods Association just finishing its annual convention here. The pick fell on Mrs. J. Richard Powell, who lives with her husband, a $2,300 a year bank clerk, and their two kids in Flushing, the Long Island suburb which will be part host to the World's Fair.

ALICE HUGHES

Mrs. Powell is a pleasant looking, sensible woman of 31 who was chosen from a field of thousands for this test. It was my chore to find out all about her home affairs and her buying habits, and I did. "I do all my housework, including the laundry," says Mrs. Typical Customer. Her boy Junior and her daughter Madeleine add about $500 a year to the family income by modeling children's wear.

Well, how about shopping, on that modest income? "After paying all the bills," Mrs. Powell told me, "I have at most $50 a month left. I use that for the family's clothing. I read all the newspaper advertisements carefully before I come into New York on a shopping tour, which is usually about once a week. Then, having chosen what seems to fill my needs, I visit the various stores, and try to get the most quality for the most modest price."

Things being as they are, Mrs. Powell has to be a careful shopper, and she is. The merchants and all us other shoppers, too, note with interest how closely she eyes the quality and the value in relation to the figures on the price tag. In short, she does not buy with the eye only, but with the mind as well—and that is vital when a woman operates on a close budget. Talking to Mrs. Powell has taught me many things, believe me. I mostly look.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Whenever you meet Helen Hayes after this, just call her "doctor" and see what happens. The wondrous little star's second degree of doctor of humane letters was handed her at Hamilton College in the most dramatic way possible, with the hall lighted only by candelabra. Then instead of saying thanks, boys, the little doc gave the crowd the "Quality of Mercy" speech from "The Merchant of Venice." Must have been some show in every way! Incidentally, since Uncle Alex Woollcott, the old fireside chatterer and essayist, is Hamilton's most publicized alumnus, I wonder if the old boy didn't have a lot to do in lining up the honor for the little Brown girl from Washington? At any rate, it's well deserved. What a woman—what an artist!

A debate I missed—"Classical Music Versus Swing," the debaters being the handsome conductor, Mackan Marrow, and the clarinet king and jitterbug rajah, Bennah Goodman. Why all that blather at the Waldorf? No one could win. Everyone to his own musical poison, I'd say . . . That Brenda Frazier, the queen of the debutantes, has now officially "come out," and thus is entitled to a bit more glitter. Not only did the gal wear a nifty mess of diamonds to the Rainbow Room the other night, but she also sniffed a bit of champagne, instead of the lemon juice she favored as a little girl. How the kids suffer!

Improve Your Conversation

DELIGHTFUL Jane—she knows what to say on every occasion!

Meeting a new man at a formal affair she's poised and cordial with "it's always nice to meet Eve's friends."

Strolling down a country lane with Don, she dresses her talk with colorful words. "Don't you love the smoky blue of autumn?"

Like money in the bank, really, is a stock of friendly phrases, lively words. No awkward moments when you have them to draw on!

An unexpected caller arrives? Say "Just the person I want to see." You're stranded with strangers at a party? "Why haven't I met you before, do you live nearby?"

When the talk gets peppery, be tactful with "That's a very interesting way to look at it." Never freeze people with "I think you're wrong."

And how you shine in conversation when you can hit the nail on the head with vivid words. Not for you to fumble with "Oh, you know what I mean!" or "It was—well, you've been at their house—you know."

You're bright, definite, with "that new tune has such a gay, lilting rhythm." "What an inviting, friendly atmosphere the Harris' home has."

With spicy phrases on tap you don't bore with bewhiskered "tried and true," "old as the hills." You're sparkling, original with "faithful as the Nile," "out-of-date as a hobble skirt."

Make your speech express your personality. Our 40-page booklet, "1,500 Useful Phrases," helps you to talk easily, interestingly on everyday social and business occasions. Lists of word combinations help you say what you mean—confidently and vividly.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Housekeeper-Cousin, Insanely Jealous of Young Wife, Insidiously Undermines Marriage; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I want your advice on behalf of a couple who have been married just about a year, and who have been living with the young man's father, a widower whose wife died several years ago. The home is run by a young woman who is a cousin of the young man and his father. She controls everything and everybody on the premises, from the father down; has charge of the purse strings, does the buying and managing and is feathering her own nest at the expense of the father and son, who handle her with kid gloves and seem really to be afraid to cross her in any way.

Now, this woman is insanely jealous of the young wife and has tried in every way to make life miserable for her. The father is afraid to speak a kind word to the girl, and her husband will not speak out in her behalf. The wife is a sweet, lovely girl, too much of a lady to assert her rights; the kind who would withdraw from the picture rather than create a scene.

And that is just what may happen. She may leave; and I would hate to see it come to that, for her husband's sake as well as her own. The other woman has already broken up a former marriage of his. Is there any way they can make the father see this troublemaker in her true colors? I urged the wife to write to you herself, after she had confided in me, but she has asked me to write for her. Hoping you can offer some suggestions for remedying this tragic situation, I am,

PERSONAL FRIEND.

The Coward and the Bully

DEAR P. F.: It has been truly said that, "the Lord helps those who help themselves." Few, indeed are the individuals so protectively cherished that they may trust, supinely, to others to provide them safe convoy through difficult or threatening situations which arise along the pathway of life. Since self-preservation is the first law of nature (we are told), society has a right to expect that the sorely put-upon individual shall be first to defend himself; and to question his natural or social worth, if he takes his licking lying down. Before a person can be helped he must first have some fight in his own system. Otherwise, you might as well give him up for lost the minute he comes face to face with a situation that requires some display of energetic self reliance.

As soon expect to inject life and spirit into a rag doll as to try to push, prod, drag and maneuver the altogether limp-spirited person into a position of adequate control over immediate circumstance. The moment you relaxed your grip on the leading strings, that moment would he flop again, leaving you wondering what your effort had been all about—and if his fate wasn't just about what he deserved, since he seems to possess no forceful personal determination to change it into something better.

In my opinion, ladyhood and meek submission to outrageous ill usage are far from being synonymous attributes. A lady, according to Webster, is "a woman having proprietary rights, rule or authority." A gentlewoman is a woman of "good family or breeding;" and breeding, we are told, embraces "knowledge of or training in ceremonies and polite observances of society." Training in the "polite observances of society" does not include training in sticking one's head in the noose and keeping it there; nor training in complaining about situations which one does nothing to better; nor training in letting cut-throat scoundrels (male or female) get away with murder, as the saying goes.

High spirit, a passionate resentment of injustice in any form, directed at any person; the ability and willingness to work toward the banishment of conscienceless tyranny and the enthronement of peaceful and reasonable justice in every human situation—these are the attributes of really superior men and women. And justice is not obtained by cravenly submitting to the rule of the brute or the shrew.

So, the first thing to tell your friend is that she is placing her personal merit in question, in letting the other woman walk roughshod over her. Whatever rights she has as a wife, in the domicile, she must quietly assume and assert, letting the chips fall where they may. She must do this as much for her husband's and his father's sake, as for her own sake, if what you say is true. To walk out of the situation, without having made a do-or-die effort to improve it, leaving two well-meaning, witlessly intimidated men at the mercy of an unscruplous interloper (who is there more for her own convenience than anyone else's), is to be guilty of arrant cowardice; to fall down on the first big job life has allocated to her to do.

Since time immemorial, the race has recognized the fact that a mild-mannered man is no match for a designing woman, in any sort of encounter; and that if her projected dirty work is to be circumvented, a member of her own sex must go into counter-action. And this is the challenge that your friend must react to. She cannot look either to her husband or to her father-in-law to save her in this situation; she must save herself and them as well. If she isn't willing to accept that challenge and that responsibility and to rely almost entirely on her own resources of wit, wisdom and hardihood (in its best sense) in seeing the job through—then there is nothing that any outsider can say or do to help her. She might as well duck out of the picture, like any mollycoddle retreating before the advance of a bully.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Suits for Spring

Paris (AP).—Silk suits for spring are taking time by the forelock, in satin-striped black moire, in black satin and in black taffeta. A black taffeta model has a jacket with a pink pocket made of small pink shells and fine beads. The jacket of a satin suit has sleeves covered with heavy satin cords running around and looking like a series of bicycle tires. Both are from Lanvin.

Stripes, Narrow And Wide, Mark New Woolens

Paris (AP).—Stripes are on the march in new woolens. They line up in close formation on diagonals and twills. They break ranks to form new wides on basket leaves and tweeds. Some lie flat, others rise in ridges. Crinkled stripes do their wavy best to break up smooth wool surfaces.

A new idea in a three-stripe pattern is a different weave for each stripe. One stripe may be smooth and plain, the next in basket weave, the third in two-tone diagonal. This pattern appears in a black and white combination, with plain, smooth black wool to complete the ensemble. Plain black woolen also goes along with one of the crinkled stripes, the stripe being in plaid about an inch wide, woven into a plain black woolen ground.

Suggestions Advanced for Care Of Aged People in Winter Time

Should Avoid Drafts and Colds Exercise and Fresh Air Are Necessary 'Cat Naps' Aid Let-Down Feeling

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

OLD PEOPLE are very sensitive to changes in atmospheric conditions. The regulation of bodily temperature is unbalanced. They no longer burn their food with the same steady flame. The blodo supply to the skin is diminished and does not fluctuate with weather changes.

Winter is the bad time with them. Quetelet drew up a table of over 400,000 cases, which showed that the largest number of deaths in people over sixty occurs in the months of December, January and February. That is undoubtedly why they seek asylum in California and Florida. And if circumstances permit, a winter trip to a warm climate pays for itself in increased comfort and even preservation of life.

If that is impossible, every effort should be made to save older people from draughts and sudden changes of temperature. Flannel or woolen clothes may be worn three-fourths of the year. And the young members of the household may have to set aside a warmer room for the habitation of their elders.

Walking Necessary

This does not mean that the elders should be constantly pampered or that they should not get some fresh air and exercise. If an old man gives up his work and sits in a warm house, the lack of fresh air and exercise will cause many symptoms. A daily or twice-daily constitutional may need some persuasion but it pays dividends which even the object of the attentions will admit.

The best time for walking or other exercise is after breakfast, and short periods must be planned because the aged easily become fatigued. After luncheon, a stroll in the fresh air will ward off the feeling of stuffiness and sleepiness.

No hard and fast rules can be laid down for the habits of the elderly. And that goes without saying because the elderly themselves put out the most insurmountable obstacles to outside interference.

About sleeping especially, no rules can be formulated. An eminent author of my acquaintance wrote me that he had solved the problem of growing old gracefully. In his office and his library he has had a couch installed, and whenever he feels like it, he takes a few minutes of "shut-eye." He says that it the best remedy for the afternoon let down.

They Do Sleep

The elderly complain that they get no sleep at all, but usually they are deceiving themselves. A physician friend of mine tells of a woman of seventy who told him she had not slept for five nights. When he made his call on her he found her fast asleep. His entrance into the room awakened her, and she demanded a hypodermic of morphine instantly and denied that she had been sleeping.

The best sleep-producer for the old are warm drinks, such as warm milk, Ovaltine, hot chocolate, or a glass of wine or beer.

860 Guests Throng White House To Shake Hands With President

Harry Hopkins Makes 'Debut' as Cabinet Officer; Shares Spotlight With Farley, Others; 'Tommy the Cork' Is Present, Then Disappears

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

Department by department, Government big-wigs—860 strong—filed through the parlors of the White House last night to shake hands with President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

The occasion was the annual State reception for officials of the Treasury, Postoffice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor Departments, and also the Federal agencies. Every member of the Cabinet whose division was represented in this listing, was on hand for the event. Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, arriving early and staying late, was a center of attention; but although he was making his "debut" at a White House reception in his newest role, he shared the spotlight with Postmaster General Farley and other Cabinet officials.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Secretary of Interior Ickes, attending his second State reception this season, came in for plenty of attention. With his wife, who was a lovely figure in a seagreen brocaded satin, cut on moyenage lines, he held a court of his own in the Red Room and was on hand a good while after President and Mrs. Roosevelt retired.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau was another who piled up plenty of popularity honors. Accompanied by Mrs. Morgenthau, who was trimly turned out in black velvet and cream lace, he led the line through the Blue Room, where President and Mrs. Roosevelt received. In contrast to other receptions, at which the Cabinet has followed the Chief Executive and First Lady only so far as the Red Room, waiting there while guests were being received, last evening all Cabinet members whose departments were represented among the honor guests also went through the line.

Meanwhile, Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring (she was gowned in gold lame) and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson (attired in white satin) waited in the Red Room with the dinner guests who assembled there shortly before the President, the First Lady, and the Cabinet queue paraded in to the tune of "Hail The Chief."

Standing before a bank of palms and ferns, the host and hostess greeted their guests for almost an hour and then retired with customary ceremony. Mrs. Roosevelt, who returned later to mingle with the guests wore one of the most stunning frocks in her wardrobe—that two-toned number featuring shades of dusty pink and plum, draped into soft lines and forming a slight train.

'Tommy the Cork' Centers Spotlight

The dinner company, gathered in the Red Room during the reception, was as interesting a group as I've seen in a long time.

"Where's Tommy Corcoran?" was the question that rippled through the crowd of press women standing just outside the door of the Red Room. Presently he was spotted over in the corner, deep in conversation with Ernest K. Lindley. Across the room, Mrs. Francis Sayre, gowned in blue and silver lame, chatted with Mrs. Arthur Bliss Lane. Later, as the Cabinet filed in, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, who wore a stunning frock of white chiffon with an orange girdle, was glimpsed in a group that included Mrs. Francis Biddle (Katherine Garrison Chapin), Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley and Miss Marguerite Le Hand, TVA Counsel Francis Biddle, Assistant Secretary of State Sayre, J. Fred Essary, and West Virginia's Governor, Homer Holt, were in another knot of guests.

A few minutes later, Mrs. James Helm, a regal figure in white transparent velvet, and Miss Malvina Thompson had joined the dinner guests in the Red Room; the Cabient had assembled there, too; the reception was well under way, and Mr. Corcoran had disappeared.

Watching the long line of guests walk through, on their way to the State Dining Room, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace seemed to know every other one in the crowd, and were busy greeting their friends throughout the entire reception. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, in as social a mood as I have ever seen her, was here, there and everywhere, completely surrounded for well over two hours.

Receiving a lion's share of attention was Col. Francis Harrington, new WPA Administrator, who seemed to know almost as many people as Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, of the Maritime Commission.

The First Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. William W. Howes, accompanied by their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Alexander Stewart, were among those who came down the receiving line early. Mrs. Howes, who looks young enough to be her daughter's sister, was gowned in burgundy taffeta. Mrs. Stewart wore a frock of white crepe, trimmed in gold sequins. J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and Mrs. Johnson were there, she gowned in white.

Edward C. Morans Through Line Early

Also in the first part of the line were the Administrator of Veterans Affairs, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, and Mrs. Hines; Robert Fechner, director of the CCC, and Mrs. Fechner, and Maritime Commissioner Edward C. Moran, jr., accompanied by Mrs. Moran, who was lovely in a gown of sapphire lace, fashioned on draped lines.

Charles B. Henderson, of the RFC, was on hand for the reception and so was Mrs. Henderson. Among scores of others glimpsed in the state dining room were Nathan Straus, of the Housing Authority, and Mrs. Straus, whose dark red velvet frock was embellished with an off-the-shoulder neckline, trimmed in cream lace; Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. Blair Bannister, a handsome figure in steel blue satin; Mrs. Florence S. Kerr, assistant WPA administrator, gowned in black lace; Turner W. Battle, of the Department of Labor, and Mrs. Battle; Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Bureau of Home Economics.

Nellie Tayloe Ross Glimpsed in Crowd

Director of the Mint, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, was seen in the red room, her American Beauty bengaline frock a gay splash of color in the throng. Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau was there, wearing a pretty black lace frock, set off with a red velvet rose on the front.

Others seen either in the line, in the state dining room, the red room, or the east room, where dancing was featured entertainment were the Solicitor of the Department of Agriculture, Mastin G. White, accompanied by Mrs. White, who wore a violent crepe frock, made on semiprincess lines with short puffed sleeves; Mrs. Allard Gasque, Mrs. Harry L. Brown, wife of the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Frederic William Wile, Mrs. Dwight Webb, and many more.

The Roosevelts Hosts at Dinner

President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained last evening at another of the small dinners they give preceding receptions at the White House.

Heading the list of guests before the reception for officials of the departments of the Treasury, Postoffice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor and the Federal agencies, were the Governor of West Virginia and Mrs. Homer T. Holt.

Also present were Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, and Mrs. Sayre; Carl McFarland, Assistant Attorney General, and Mrs. McFarland; Smith W. Purdum, the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, and Mrs. Purdum; the United States Minister to Yugoslavia and Mrs. Arthur Bliss Lane, and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Biddle, of Germantown, Pa. Mrs. Biddle writes as Katherine Garrison Chapin. Her symphonic poem, "Lament for the Stolen," was recently presented by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Still others at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. George Carlin, Thomas G. Corcoran, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lindley and Miss Marguerite LeHand. Table decorations were pink roses, pussy willow and maidenhair fern.

About The Town

—With Dudley Harmon

ANOTHER Washington landmark is, we hear, about to go the way of so many other famous homes. They say that Mrs. Nicholas Longworth's yellow-stone residence on Massachusetts avenue, on the market for quite a while, has at last been sold and will be turned into a lodging house.

DUDLEY HARMON

Miss Evelyn Heepe, who gave a recital at the Danish Legation yesterday, went from her home in England to Denmark over 20 years ago to stay for a week and has lived there ever since. It was during the World War; she missed the last boat to leave for England as the German blockade went into effect, and while waiting for the war to end, decided to make Denmark her headquarters for good. Now she lectures on literature at the University of Copenhagen when she is not traveling.

Miss Heepe, who speaks Danish, French and German as well as English, spoke in the latter language at the legation yesterday. She recited a fable by Hans Christian Andersen, the Danish writer whose fairy tales for children are known in every country. She also recited one scene from "An-Idealist," a play by a Danish clergyman who lives in a little fishing village and now has five of his dramas running all at once in Copenhagen theaters; "A Parable of Spring," by Helge Rode, another writer of that country, and "The Fresh Mind," by the English humorist, A. P. Herbert, who is a member of Parliament and author of the book "Holy Deadlock."

Mrs. Roosevelt again showed her interest in women with interesting careers of having Miss Heepe to lunch yesterday at the White House. The recitalist, incidentally, can quote whole plays practically by heart.

Gathered in the drawing room to hear her yesterday was a distinguished audience, which included Miss Mabel Boardman, the Charge d'Affaires of the British Embassy and Mrs. Victor Mallet, the latter just returned from horseback riding, which she keeps up in spite of the extremely cold weather; Mrs. Cordell Hull, in her favorite black, sitting with Mme. van Kaathoven; Senora de Espil, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling.

Others were Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., whose green wool dress and leopard skin hat were very smart; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Miss Mary Patten, Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Charge d'Affaires Hans Thomsen, of the German Embassy, and half a hundred others.

Mme. Wadsted, who only recently returned from a stay of over a year in Europe, wore a long black georgette gown and several strands of pearls. The only decoration in the drawing room was an enormous vase of white calla lilies at one end.

Miss Heepe's recital was preceded by a graceful little speech made by Minister Wadsted.

Society was well represented at the Budge-Vines tennis matches at College Park on Monday evening. Among those glimpsed in the audience were Lawrence Baker, who is secretary of the American Lawn Tennis Association; Mr. and Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Ruth Sowers, in tweeds; Mr. and Mrs. Horace Peters and Eugene O'Dunne.

ODDS AND ENDS: Lady Lindsay, who left the British Embassy while it is undergoing repairs, is now in Arizona for a stay . . . A friend who returned from a stay in Ottawa is fascinated by all the pomp of Government House, but has, however, one object: it seems that if one encounters the Governor General, Lord Tweedsmuir, on the ice rink, one is expected to curtsy even on skates.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

MIDDLEBURG HUNT met at the Glenwood Race Track yesterday for a bye day, after not having been able to go out for a week on account of deep snows. Scenting conditions were of the best and hounds were soon away, giving the riders a run of several hours.

Among those following the master, Daniel C. Sands, were Mrs. Rigan McKinney, Mrs. Thomas Mason, Lady Diana Drury, Miss June Hanes, Miss Nancy Iselin, Miss Anne Leith, Mis Connie Regan, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Skinner, Mrs. Robert Maddux, Harry W. Smith, Stephen Clark, Jerry Webb, Mike Kerr, Crompton Smith and others.

MISS JUNE HANES, down from Washington for a visit, is staying at the Spur and Spoon Club at Foxcroft.

Mr. and Mrs. Colin McLeod, of Baltimore, who have been visiting Sandy McLeod at his home, Huntland, since before Christmas, will leave today for Miami Beach, Fla., where Mr. McLeod has some of his race horses running at Hialeah Park.

COL. AND MRS. JOHN BUTLER entertained at dinner last evening in honor of Mrs. Butler's niece, Miss Priscilla Macy, of New York. Among the guests were Mrs. Rigan McKinney, Miss Connie Regan, Dulany Randolph, Prosser Tabb and Louie Duffey.

Mrs. James B. Skinner has gone to New Orleans, her old home, for a visit of several weeks. She will be joined in New Orleans by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cartiere, who have rented their place, Boxwood, for the season. Later on the Cartieres will motor to California, returning to Virginia in the early spring.

FREDDY WARBURG and his brother, Alec Warburg, left for New York yesterday, but will be back for the coming week-end.

Mr and Mrs. Richard B. Wiltshire, of Upperville, are being congratulated on the birth, January 20 at Winchester Hospital, of a daughter, Caroline Lowe. The little girl is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lowe, of Upperville.

Roosevelts Indifferent to 'Tails' At White House Receptions

First Lady Tells Reporters Custom Started Before Her Time; Erna Fergusson Is Guest at Press Conference

Whether male guests at White House receptions wear "white ties and tails" or dinner jackets makes no difference to Mrs. Roosevelt. The custom of turning out to state functions in strictly formal attire was started long before her time, she said yesterday, and she and the President had nothing to do with it.

The discussion came up at the First Lady's press conference yesterday when someone told her that a number of Representatives and Senators were hoping that "white ties and tails would cease to be prescribed attire" for the annual Congressional reception. Mrs. Roosevelt made it clear that neither she nor the President cared whether her guests wore black ties or white.

Someone in the conference remarked that the only formal party at the Executive Mansion this year at which any men appear in black ties was the Congressional reception, where approximately a third of the men came thus attired. "Let them come as they wish," Mrs. Roosevelt said in conclusion.

Miss Fergusson Guest at Conference

A guest at the conference was Miss Erna Fergusson, vice president of the New Mexico Coronado Quarto-Centennial, who described some of the plans under way for a series of fiestas to celebrate the founding of the oldest white settlement in this country. The festivals, beginning in May, 1940, will continue through September of that year, and will be held at a number of towns in New Mexico, including Albuquerque and Santa Fe.

Miss Fergusson stressed the point that the whole history of the West will be portrayed in the series of celebrations. Every effort is being made to keep the festivals on a dignified plane. "There will be no Sally Rands to entertain the crowds," she added.

Following the press conference, Miss Fergusson was a luncheon guest of Mrs. Roosevelt. Later, the visitor left for New York, where she will stay briefly before returning to her home in New Mexico.

This morning, Mrs. Roosevelt will visit the District Household Project at 11 o'clock. At noon, she will be at Children's Hospital to pose for photographs in connection with the President's Birthday Ball.

Full Schedule For First Lady

A tea at the White House for delegates to the Cause and Cure of War Conference is on this afternoon's schedule, and tonight both the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the horse show at Fort Myer.

Tomorrow afternoon there will be a musicale at the White House and that evening Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the dinner of the Alliance of Rural Youth. On Friday she will entertain at a luncheon in compliment to Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, whose husband recently retired from the Cabinet. The event originally was arranged to honor both Mrs. Roper and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, but the latter will be out of town that day, she and the former Attorney General having already made plans to leave tomorrow for a Florida vacation.

On Monday Mrs. Roosevelt will attend Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicale, and the same day will be hostess at a luncheon for some of the younger motion picture stars who will be here for the President's birthday affairs. That evening she will make a round of the hotels.

She will have her next press conference on Tuesday, will be feted at a luncheon given by the Secretary of Labor, Frances Perkins, that day, and with the President will entertain that evening at the annual state dinner for the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Houston Niller Debutante Guest At Downs Supper

One of the final debutante parties of the season took place last evening when Donald Downs entertained at a buffet supper in honor of Miss Houston Niller, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Niller.

The event took place at Mr. Downs country estate, Downscrest, near McLean, Va., and the 30 or more guests were ushered into the large game and billiard rooms. There, the large open-hearth fire flickered on the paneled walls and beamed ceiling while the buffet offered all varieties of succulent dishes.

Approximately 20 of the guests were contemporary debutantes of Miss Niller, and the others were friends of her parents and Mr. Downs.

Morgenthaus Give Dinner Tonight

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., will entertain at a dinner tonight at their home on Thirtieth street.

Among their guests will be the Secretary's father, Henry Morgenthau, of New York, former United States Ambassador to Turkey.

Miss May Speed Betrothed to M. J. Sexton

N. Y. Girl Descendant Of George Mason and Poet John Keats

Of interest to former Gunston Hall classmates of Miss May Mason Speed, of New York, is the announcement by her mother, Mrs. Philip Speed, of the University of Virginia, of her engagement to Michael James Sexton, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

The father of the prospective bride, the late Philip Speed, was on the staff of the New York World. Her uncle, Keats Speed, is managing editor of the New York Sun.

Miss Speed was educated at Gunston Hall, at Sweetbrier College and at the Conservatoire American, at Fontainbleau. On her mother's side she is a descendant of George Mason, of Gunston Hall, author of the Bill of Rights and the Virginia Constitution, and of James Murray Mason, Ambassador from the Confederacy to England, and of Chief Justice Benjamin Chew, of Philadelphia. On her paternal side she is descended from Sir John Speed, historian and cartographer to Queen Elizabeth. She is a great-great-niece of the poet, John Keats, and of James Speed, Attorney General in Lincoln's Cabinet.

Mr. Sexton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eldredge Sexton, of Sioux Falls. He was graduated from the University of Minnesota and is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity.

The marriage will take place early in the spring at the University of Virginia.

Gen. Cox, Wife To Give Dinner

Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox are among those who will entertain at dinner this evening before the Horse Show scheduled to take place at Fort Myer today and Thursday as part of the President's birthday celebration.

They will have as their guests Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas, Col. and Mrs. David McCoach, and Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner Boothe, and will take them on to the show.

The latter promises to be one of the outstanding events of the season, and the audience will include scores of notables, among them President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Feudal Lords Describe Serk to Press Women

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hathaway, Rulers of The Channel Island, Are Guests At Luncheon; Tell of 600-Year-Old Customs

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

Discussions of war in China, war in Spain and dictators in Europe, were forgotten at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club yesterday with a description of the peaceful Isle of Serk given by its feudal overlords, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hathaway, who were guests of honor.

Mrs. Hathaway, the Dame of Serk, is not a dictator although the problems of all of the island's 600 farmers and fisher folk are brought to her door. There is a parliament of 40 members, all owners of farms handed down since the sixteenth century, and 15 elected deputies, not farm owners. Everyone on the island is obliged to perform some service, without remuneration, she said. Two constables are elected each year and those chosen cannot refuse to serve although there is no pay for it. Neither are the members of the parliament paid. The contentment and harmony in the island is due in a large measure to the plan of universal service in its government, Mrs. Hathaway believes.

House Was Built In Sixteenth Century

She holds the island, the last feudal state in the world, under the original grant from Elizabeth to Sir Helier de Carteret. Her home, with the exception of central heating, light, and a tall tower built by her grandfather so as to signal the Island of Guernsey, is as it was in 1565. The island has a constitution, and laws are made by its parliament, but the Dame of Serk has the power of veto in case she desires to use it.

The gracious English woman looked little like a feudal overlord but one had the impression she could exert her power of veto if necessary. She had clear blue eyes, a fresh complexion, and gray hair. She wore a black dress with threads of silver through the material, a turquoise necklace of many strands, earrings to match, and a black hat.

The laws of the island are not complex. There are no problems such as income or inheritance taxes, unemployment or trade unions: neither are there sidewalks, street lights nor motor cars. Automobiles are barred because the Dame of Serk believes they would mar the beauty of the lovely lanes with overhanging trees. "The island will probably be the last refuge of the horse," she observed. The island has a jail, but the only prisoner in years was a girl caught stealing handkerchiefs from a clothesline. She was afraid to stay in the jail alone, so they left the door open and her mother sat on the steps.

The inhabitants of the island pay ground rent, a tenth of their grain, every tenth lamb, a chicken for every chimney on a house, and so forth, to Mrs. Hathaway. She in turn is subject only to the King of England, her feudal overlord, to whom she pays a knight's fee. The British sovereign is often referred to as the Duke of Normandy rather than the King of England, she said, because, harking back to the illustrious leader of their ancestors, William the Conqueror, the Serkmen say, "England belongs to us."

Thousands of Tourists Visit Island

Each summer nearly 25,000 tourists visit the island, but their stay is usually from 11 in the morning to 3 in the afternoon. There are four little inns where a few may be accommodated but when accommodations at these are taken, there is nothing for other visitors to do but leave.

No tourists may visit the island on Sundays. The Sabbath is strictly observed. Everybody goes to the Anglican Church, where a morning service is conducted in English and an evening service in French. "French is the official language of the island but among ourselves, we speak old Norman," said Mrs. Hathaway.

"Serk is not a feudal pageant got up to amuse tourists," she said. "It remains a feudal state because the people prefer a government which was old-fashioned 600 years ago, and it has many things to recommend it."

Mr. Hathaway spoke briefly following his wife. Asked as to his position, he said that it had been explained to him, "Your position is that if the Dame of Serk murdered somebody, you'd be hanged for it." In past centuries the seigneur of Serk was always from the Isle of Jersey. The present one is from New Jersey instead and a graduate of Yale.

The history of the island is told in a novel written by Mrs. Hathaway, which will be issued in the spring under the title "Duilette."

Friday she will lecture before the National Geographic Society. She and Mr. Hathaway leave the last of the week for Gloucester, Mass., to visit friends and she will then embark on a lecture tour in this country and Canada, which will keep them on this continent until April.

Women to Aid At Gallinger

Members of the Government and Child Welfare Department of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters yesterday responded to an appeal from the social service department of Gallinger Hospital for volunteer workers. The request for volunteers was read at a luncheon and business meeting at the Smorgasbord. Miss Beatrice McConnell, chief of the industrial division of the Children's Bureau, who discussed child labor provisions in the fair labor standards act, was guest speaker.

The social service department at Gallinger, establishment of which was urged by women's organizations, including the league, asked volunteers for the motor corps to take social workers on calls and help transportation of patients; for routine clerical work and for folding gauze to relieve the busy nurses of this work.

Volunteers also were requested for the pediatric wards to help feed the children, give them liquid and entertain them; to register patients and assist the nurses; to take children to the crippled children's clinic and assist the nurse there and to aid in the maternity ward, giving patients their trays, writing letters for them, folding linen and helping to make beds.

Mrs. Charles Lee Hodge, chairman of government and child welfare for the local league, presided at the meeting. She introduced Miss McConnell, who outlined the provisions of the fair labor standards act with regard to children; the basic 16-year minimum age; exemption for 14 and 15-year-old children under certain circumstances and the importance of the proof of age. Cooperative relationship with 42 States and the District of Columbia has been set up for the issuance of age certificates by State agencies, she said.

She also explained the protection of children through the determination of hazardous occupations. These are decided on, she said, through a study by her department, consultation with workers and employers and public hearings.

Camp Fire Girl Leaders Plan To Extend Work

Miss Wahlstrom, Field Aide, Confers On New Program

Extension of the Camp Fire Girls' program in Washington was discussed last night at a meeting of parents, representatives from various organizations and girls from local Camp Fire groups in the Willard Hotel. The session was called by Miss Catherine Wahlstrom, of New York, national field worker.

Miss Wahlstrom will be here for the rest of the week, conferring with those interested in the organization. Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenburg, a national advisory council woman, spoke briefly.

Miss Wahlstrom announced "Americana" as the twenty-seventh anniversary project for 1939. This will include the study of early American life, customs, costumes, recipes and homes. Allied projects in music, poetry, dramatics and early American handicraft will be carried on in connection with this program. The purpose, Miss Wahlstrom explained, will be to give the girls a broader understanding of the background of American life and its significance in their own lives.

Handicraft Work Is Displayed

She exhibited handicraft articles made by girls in different parts of the country. These included a torchbearer's count book, the record of her achievements and experiences as she progresses in Camp Fire work; a rain cape made from oiled silk, copied from an early American Shaker bonnet; an Americana charm bracelet; hand-tooled leather articles and examples of book-binding and bead work.

Local Camp Fire girls who gave a demonstration of their training included Patricia Murnane, Jeanne Clark, Elaine Wilson, Helen Bennett, Anne Kline, Karin Leach and Marjorie Schaefer.

Adams, in a vigorous opening statement, appealed to the Senate not to "experiment" with spending to a point that the Nation's credit is endangered, and alleged "misrepresentation of the situation, some innocent and some not innocent."

"It isn't just this $150,000,000," said Adams. "It is the effect of the needless appropriation of an excess on the thinking of our people . . . Don't let us experiment to find the point beyond which we cannot go."

He said that if Congress "can show the country that it is studying this problem of expenditures, that Congress means to be considerate of the taxpayer, that Congress before it appropriates will study and think of the consequences, there will be a wave of encouragement throughout this land which may do a vast amount of good."

Then Adams charged Harrington had mistaken the amount actually necessary to meet WPA deficiences for the year.

Calls Mistake "Obvious"

"Col. Harrington's figures are not correct," said Adams. "He has made a mistake of $56,000,000 and we are dealing with an issue of $150,000,000.

"How does he make that mistake? He tells us that there is money available now on hand to pay the expenses up until February 7. Then, when he proceeds to figure what we need to appropriate, he goes back to February 1, and doubles the appropriation. So he figures we are going to spend twice from the 1st to the 7th of February, which involves $45,000,000. It is a perfectly obvious mistake."

The remaining $11,000,000 of Harrington's $56,000,000 "mistake," Senator Adams, said, was due to the administrator's failure to allow for transfer of $60,000,000 to certain Federal agencies to take care of 90,000 workers drawing PWA pay until March 1.

"'Any man who makes substantial mistakes naturally subjects the rest of his testimony to scrutiny," Adams told the Senate.

Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, author of the Appropriation Committee's minority report urging the full $875,000,000 appropriation, asked if Adams was correct, why the bill increased the $60,000,000 allocation to other departments to $83,000,000. Adams said this was necessary to continue the pay of these persons from March 1 to July 1.

The Coloradan then called attention to a $292,000,000 discrepancy between figures presented to the committee by WPA and a Treasury statement of WPA unexpended and unobligated balances submitted by the President.

Barkley Blames Treasury

He said the Treasury report submitted by the President showed the WPA had $482,000,000 of unobligated funds December 31. Previously, he said, Harrington had supplied WPA data listing unobligated funds as of December 31 at $190,000,000.

Senator Barkley later said the difference may have been due to the fact that the Treasury does not immediately receive its figures from the WPA, and that it sometimes takes the Treasury a week or more to get its figures up to date with WPA balances.

Winding up the committee's case for a reduced appropriation, coupled with safeguards against dismissal of workers in the months of February and March, Senator Byrnes took the floor before the recess to defend adequacy of the $725,000,000 appropriation.

While McKellar had argued the committee plan would force WPA rolls down from an average of 3,000,000 in February to 1,350,000 in June, Byrnes said the sum could be spread to provide for an average of 2,000,000 on WPA in June, allowing for more steeply graduated cuts beginning in April.

Starting in that month, the South Carolinian said WPA construction under contract and expanding agricultural and business demands may be expected to provide more jobs.

Allowing for the Harrington "mistake" in February needs, Byrnes estimated only $137,250,000 in new appropriations would be needed in that month; $173,850,000 in March; $152,500,000 in April; $140,300,000 in May and $122,000,000 in June.

McKellar Backs Harrington

The Administration's case for the full $875,000,000 appropriation was stated by Senator McKellar, who will offer the amendment to restore the $150,000,000 House cut. McKellar contended the $725,000,000 appropriation would "take off three out of every four men now on the rolls." This was later disputed by both Adams and Byrnes.

McKellar argued that actually 4,100,000 persons were certified for relief at the start of the year, and the committee appropriation would cut them to 1,050,000 at the end of June.

"That's a long step to take in six months," said McKellar. "If you vote for the lower amount, you vote for a reduction of nearly three-fourths, or 75 per cent."

Disagreeing with Adams' criticism of Harrington, the Tennesseean declared the WPA administrator was a "careful and accurate" witness.

Roosevelt Offers Trade Aid Plan for Free Philippines

A formula under which the United States would continue to give certain trade privileges to the Philippines for 15 years after the islands attain political independence in 1946 was sent to Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt.

He expressed approval of the program, drawn up by a committee appointed by him and by President Quezon of the islands. To maintain economic stability in the islands, the committee advised against withdrawing all trade preferences in 1946, suggesting instead a gradual withdrawal between that year and 1960.

Chairman Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, and Kocialkowski (Democrat) Illinois, of the Senate and House Insular Committees, said the necessary legislation would be introduced within the next few days. They said Congressional action was "urgent," but declined to amplify the statement.

by representatives of organized medicine. The advance was held directly responsible for a $1,500,000 budget slash in the corporation's appropriation for this year and fresh retaliation of a similar nature is feared when the 1940 budget is considered.

A native of Niagara Falls, N. Y., Dr. Carman received his master's and doctor's degrees from Cornell. He is a member of the American Statistical, American Economic and American Farm Economic associations. He lives, with his wife and two small sons, at 4402 Elm street, Chevy Chase, Md.

One of his first acts as president was to acknowledge yesterday the letter of resignation received from Dr. Selders. In a statement to the press, the latter said:

"My resignation has been tendered as medical director of the Group Health Association, Inc. This resignation is voluntary on my part and has been actuated by my desire to re-enter private practice.

"My prime interest in the field of medicine is in surgery and owing to the fact that I am unable to have the facilities to carry on this work under the present circumstances, I feel that it is to my best interests to give up my present conection in order that I may be admitted to hospitals recognized by the American Medical Association.

"I am a firm believer in the idea of group health practice and wish to laud the noble efforts of those who are responsible for initiating and promulgating the group health idea. I feel that it is only a matter of time until the idea will be accepted and promulgated by organized medicine."

Replying, Dr. Garman said the board of trustees, in accepting Dr. Selder's resignation, "is unanimous in commending the untiring effort which you have devoted to developing the Group Health Association and compliments you on the fine medical staff which has been assembled and the work they have accomplished, which we consider to be an outstanding contribution to co-operative group practice."

Christian Science Lecture Delivered On Government

A lecture on "Christian Science: The Science of Government," was delivered last evening in First Church of Christ, Scientist, by Gavin W. Allan, C. S. B., of Toronto. Mr. Gavin is a member of the board of lectureship of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston. He was introduced by Mrs. Helen G. McNeill, second reader of First Church, which sponsored this lecture. The lecturer said in part:

"If those who have the advantage of education, if those who have been trained to think, do not use these gifts in the service of their country, and if those who have not the same background of culture and education are busy every moment for selfish ends, how can we expect righteous government? Which class is to blame? Emphatically, both.

"An enlightened citizenship is the need of the hour. Individual liberties are under constant and subtle attack, and alertness is required to safeguard popular government and civil and religious freedom."

Gianninis Contend Banks Are Outside NLRB Jurisdiction

Claiming that banks as "instrumentalities of the Government" do not come under jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board and that the Bank of America has never violated the Wagner act, attorneys for the California banking institution yesterday asked the NLRB to dismiss complaints made against it by the United Office and Professional Workers of America.

At a hearing attended by both A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board of directors, and L. M. Giannini, the president, A. J. Scampini, attorney, declared that Edward C. Washer had been dismissed from the bank for insubordination and not because of union activities.

Bridge Groups Sponsor Blood 'Bank' Parties

Blood

Henderson Manor and the Henderson to hold special parties for the benefit of the blood "bank" fund.

Two committees of the Washington Junior Board of Commerce announced, through their chairmen, that that organization will set up a special committee among its members to organize additional small and large parties.

Dr. Darrell C. Crain, chairman of the junior board's public health committee, and Dr. James A. Nolan, chairman of the Youth Welfare Committee of that organization, jointly announced that the project had received the enthusiastic indorsement of their committees.

Plans were announced for a party at the Army and Navy Club, February 9, the University Club, February 12, and the Columbia Country Club, February 13.

Seek More Tickets

Mrs. Winslow B. Van Devanter, chairman of a ladies' committee of more than 100 members, announced yesterday as a group of workers who will organize small and large parties at private homes throughout the city, reported that members of her committee were already requesting additional allotments of tickets.

These tickets—made in the form of large red hearts, with space for each guest's name—may be obtained at the counter on the first floor of The Post Building, 1337 E street northwest. Mail requests, accompanied by money order, check or cash, will be filled immediately.

Tickets are $1 each and entitle the purchaser to just two things—a pleasant evening of bridge or whatever other game may be chosen; an opportunity to fulfill one of Washington's greatest needs, the establishment of a permanent blood and serum "bank" at Children's Hospital.

And every penny realized from the sale of tickets at $1 each to the city-wide card and game party to be held on St. Valentine's Day—or during that week—will go to establish such a "bank" at Children's Hospital. No expenses deducted.

6 Fellow Officers Offer Blood to Rookie, Stricken After Infection Develops From Mild Irritation

Six Metropolitan policemen were rushed from their beats yesterday to offer blood to a 25-year-old police rookie, desperately ill of pneumonia and an infection traceable to a mild skin irritation.

Several weeks ago Private William J. Coffman, the rookie, was troubled with the irritation of a small eruption on the back of his hand by the sleeve of his uniform coat.

A blood infection and then pneumonia followed. Coffman was taken to George Washington University Hospital Sunday night. His condition grew steadily worse until yesterday when an appeal for blood donors was made.

Of the six policemen who responded, John F. Ash, of the Second Precinct, was selected to give a pint of blood. Dr. Warren Sager, police surgeon, announced last night an improvement in Coffman's condition following the transfusion.

Coffman's wife, Mrs. Kathleen Scott Coffman, was at her young husband's bedside during the crisis yesterday. Coffman, appointed to the force last July, is attached to the Eleventh Precinct and lives at 118 Fifth street southeast.

Lutherans to Map Social Relations

The church and its social relationships will be discussed at annual meeting of the National Lutheran Council, opening at 10 a. m. today at the Ambassador Hotel.

Ever Wonder Why You're Constipated?

Do you ever have days when you just have to drag yourself along, when you feel tired, sunk—because of that constipation? Then why not find out the real cause of your trouble?

What have you had to eat lately? Just things like meat, bread and potatoes? If that's it, you may not have to look any farther. It's likely your trouble is you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and aids elimination.

If "bulk" is what you lack, your ticket is a dish of crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. It contains the "bulk" you need plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B1.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars"! Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

WPA Ruling Hits Crippled D.C. Children

Teachers Selected For Home Schooling Dropped Because They Are Mothers

Washington's "forgotten" children—the several hundred cripples who are denied schooling—faced a rather dismal prospect yesterday as a result of two development:

1. Discharge by the local Works Progress Administration, under a policy broadcast by the national WPA, of mothers with dependent children selected as teachers in the WPA project to provide instruction for local crippled children.

2. The remote chance, as a result of a Budget Bureau veto, that funds will be provided in the District appropriation bill to be passed at this session of Congress for payment of salaries of visiting teachers.

Hard Blow Struck

Dismissal from the local WPA roll of more than 600 aged persons and women with dependent children has struck a hard blow at the $18,000 project for instruction to crippled children. Other projects employing women with dependent children also have been hit.

The dismissals are due to the fact that aged persons and women with dependent children are eligible for social security grants. Arrangements for extending this aid to persons dropped from the local WPA roll, however, is greatly hampered due to the extremely limited staff of the public assistance division of the Board of Public Welfare, which handles the social security cases.

Nearly half the 200 children for whom the WPA instruction project was organized will be affected by the dismissals, officials said. Two teachers have already been dropped and others are slated to go.

Meanwhile the Budget Bureau, it was learned, cut from the District budget as approved by the Commissioners a $10,000 item for six visiting teachers, four for white children and two for colored children.

Visiting Teachers Needed

As a result, unless members of the House or Senate Appropriation subcommittees considering the District supply bill become interested in the problem, there is small chance that the long-delayed program for visiting teachers will be launched in the next fiscal year.

The uncertainty of WPA as an instrument for providing instruction to local crippled children has emphasized the need for making funds available for a staff of visiting teachers, persons interested in the project commented.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board of education, who has advocated for several years the plan for visiting teachers, expressed the hope that Congress "eventually" would make money available for this purpose.

Plant Pigment Measured to Tell Sunlight Used

The amount of sunlight used by a growing plant can be determined with a new device perfected by Dr. Earl S. Johnston, of the Division of Radiation and Organisms, Smithsonian Institute, it was announced yesterday.

The device, accurate to one part in 10,000, measures the green pigment in the plant's leaves. The pigment, chlorophyll, is nature's "catalyst;" with sunlight for energy and air and water for raw materials, it manufactures the starches and sugars that are the basis of both plant and animal life.

Dr. Johnston dissolves the chlorophyll of a leaf, and passes through the solution a light beam which is absorbed by the chlorophyll. Any light that gets through is measured by a thermocouple.

Prizefighter Held In $850 Robbery Of Wallace Beach

Scroggins was held under $10,000 pending a hearing January 26. He pleaded not guilty.

SISTER SERENA

Legs and One Arm Nearly Useless, Aged Pharmacist of Providence Still Does Her Bit Making Up Capsule Containers

By Gerald G. Gross

Sister Serena is a symbol within a symbol. Providence Hospital, which she has served for 59 of its 77 years, stands for the care of the needy sick. Sister Serena has devoted her entire life to the alleviation of their ills and injuries. She will be 80 in August.

For 55 years she operated the hospital pharmacy. A little over four years ago she was taken seriously ill. Today, though she is confined to a wheelchair and lacks the use of her legs, Sister Serena serves her poor with as much zeal as ever.

No longer can she compound prescriptions. But containers must be provided for all pills and capsules and Sister Serena is quite able to make up and pack the little cardboard boxes. So she sits each day before a window, doing her bit for those she loves and pities so much.

"Such suffering! Such distress!"

Her thoughts go back, as she speaks, 20, 30, 50 years when patients had only too pathetically few of the conveniences in use today. When insulin treatment of diabetes was unkown, when anesthesia was still in its infancy, when diphtheria cases were isolated in an old barn.

While her main responsibility was the pharmacy, she went frequently into the wards to minister to the suffering. She has seen, by the hundreds, children in the torture of lockjaw, emaciated mothers pleading for the lives of their rachitic babies, handsome little boys and girls racked by diphtheria gasping for breath. Yet Sister Serena never succeeded in conditioning herself to human misery. Her heart is too big.

Although she has been away from the hospital's twin pharmacy, one for bed patients and the other for dispensary cases, since 1935, people still ask for her there. They are, for the most part, the "old timers," lifelong residents of the Southeast and Southwest sections, whose parents before them knew the kindnesses of Sister Serena.

Being the only volunteer hospital located in the Capital's "south side," where a great percentage of the poor live, it is understandable that Providence dispenses more charity than any other private institution of its kind in Washington.

Yet it does no harm to think—and this may be largely true—that it isn't geography but Sister Serena's kindliness which has made Providence the magnet it is for the impoverished sick.

To that she would say "nonsense!" or some equivalent. Her main thought in life has been to help those needing help. Talking about her deeds of mercy or what she may have contributed to the institution is not in her line.

"This is a penance," she sighed, as the photographer prepared to take her picture.

Sister Serena practically taught herself pharmacy. When she started out qualifications to practice were far less rigorous than now. Nevertheless, she was not satisfied to get along on what she knew but determined to add and keep adding to her knowledge of drugs. Books helped and so did staff doctors and other pharmacists.

When it became compulsory by law to pass a state board examination to practice in the District, Sister Serena was a candidate and won her certificate.

During the year preceding her illness she filled, or supervised the filling of, approximately 35,000 prescriptions. More than a third of these went to her favorites—the dispensary patients.

Today she sits in her wheelchair folding capsule cartons. Sister Serena still serves, though her legs are useless and one arm, fractured in a fall not long ago, is pretty numb.

"I think I've already folded millions of these boxes," she says, smiling, in that sweetly pitched voice of hers.

Curley Terms Charity an Obligation

'Faith Without Good Work Is Dead;' He Tells Catholic Body At Annual Meeting

Charity is not something you may do or not as you like, but an obligation of all Christians, Archbishop Curley told the annual meeting of the Catholic Charities of Washington in the Raleigh Hotel last night.

"Faith without good works is dead," he said, emphasizing that the importance of charity is rather to increase the faith of the giver than to benefit the receiver.

Reports Presented

The meeting was opened by Dr. Henry J. Crosson, president of the Catholic Charities, and reports were presented by its member organizations. The Rev. Laurence J. Shehan, director of the family and children's departments, reported that 1,273 families and 513 children had been cared for in the past year at a cost of $65,325.13, but inadequate funds, he said, made it impossible to care for all who applied for assistance.

George J. Cleary, president of St. Vincent de Paul Society, reported that the society had helped 1,276 families at a cost of $43,371.38, and Mrs. Frank Schwoerer, president of the Ladies of Charity, reported an expenditure during 1938 of $6,418.70 by that society in family relief. Mrs. George O'Connor reported that the milk fund had provided 28,255 quarts of milk to undernourished children during the year.

Miss Mary Mattingly reported on the work of the school service committee of the Sodality Union; Dr. J. A. Nolan, executive of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, spoke for the Merrick Boys' Camp, and Mrs. Frederick Altemus for the Christ Child Society.

Founder Paid Tribute

Paying tribute to the work of these organizations among the poor families of Washington, Archbishop Curley spoke particularly warm of Mary Merrick, founder of the Christ Child Society. Although only a lay woman, he said, her saintly influence spreads to the ends of America. He emphasized the importance of charity in Washington, where, in spite of the city's wealth, "we have poverty galore."

The following officers were elected: Dr. Henry J. Crosson, president; George H. O'Connor, first vice president; John Saul, second vice president; James E. Colliflower, third vice president; Allen Pope, secretary; Adam A. Weschler, treasurer.

Board of Directors

The following were elected to the board of directors: Caesar L. Aiello, Dr. Ernest Aschenbach, Frederick Altemus, Henry J. Auth, George I. Borgen, Francis X. Callahan, Michael F. Calnan, the Rev. J. K. Cartwright, Walter J. Casey, Eugene A. Clark, George J. Cleary, William J. Cogger, Leo A. Codd, the Right Rev. E. J. Connolly, J. Hadley Doyle, Dr. George R. Ellis, James B. Flynn, Francis J. Men's Club of Brookland Church Honors L. W. Plowman, Master of East Gate Masons

Shown at the "Loyalty Night" program given last night by the Men's Club of the Church of Our Saviour honoring Louis W. Plowman are (from left) Edwin R. Speak, club president; Eugene E. Thompson, grand master of District Masons; Louis W. Plowman, and the Rev. Alvin Lomar Wills. Mr. Plowman is a leader in the Brookland Parish of the Protestant Episcopal Church and worshipful master of East Gate Lodge, No. 34, F. A. A. M.

Honoring Louis W. Plowman, Brookland citizen, churchman and Mason, more than 100 members of the Men's Club of the Episcopal Church of Our Saviour held a gala reception last night at the parish hall. The occasion was designated as "loyalty night."

Marking his recent elevation to the position of worshipful master of East Gate Lodge, No. 34, the affair was a surprise for Plowman, whose achievements were told by his pastor, fellow churchmen and others. Plowman is a lawyer in the Internal Revenue department.

The Rev. Alvin Lamar Wills, rector of the host church, of which Plowman has been a member for 22 years, called attention to the fact that the guest of honor had served as vestryman, senior warden, treasurer, diocesan representative and chorister, adding that ". . . it is only fitting that we should say that no man or woman in the Brookland parish is more respected and esteemed and that none more fully commands our confidence and gratitude than does Mr. Plowman."

Others joined in the tribute, including Edwin R. Speak, Men's Club president; Past Masters David B. Perry and Charles R. Allen, the latter master of ceremonies; Grand Master Eugene E. Thompson, R. R. Molster and others.

Climaxing the praise, Plowman was presented with a mahogany gavel bearing an inscribed silver band.

After his response, Plowman looked on as his wife and his sister, Mrs. Hazel F. Barsa, were given flowers, the latter to be taken to Mr. Plowman's mother, Mrs. Grace Plowman, who was unable to be present. Edwin L., Jeanette A. and Miss Virginia M. Plowman, the guest of honor's children, also were present.

Other guests were Needham C. Turnage, Deputy Grand Master for the District of Columbia; Thomas C. Mettler, Past Grand Master for the District of Columbia; Thomas C. Mettler, Past Grand Master for the Odd Fellows of the District; officers and past presidents of the Men's Club and other officials of the East Gate Lodge.

Groups Rally to Fight Proposed D. C. Sales Tax

Spurred by fear Congress may act on a proposed District sales tax without formal hearings, heads of the Citizens Committee for Fair Taxation last night invited 40 civic groups to send representatives to a meeting at 8 tonight in the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., committee chairman, said the sales tax is "deservedly one of the most unpopular taxes ever devised."

Police Control Of Pedestrians Waits on Seal

Advisory Council Plan To Get More Study Before Its Adoption

Action on pedestrian control proposals adopted at a recent meeting of the Traffic Advisory Council will be deferred for further study by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, it was announced at the District Building yesterday.

Although having previously indorsed pedestrian control "in principle," both Commissioners Hazen and McCoach said the council's recommendations would be given careful consideration before official action.

Less drastic than the original proposals of Traffic Director Van Duzer, the council's suggested ordinance places a greater portion of the responsibility upon motorists. One regulation reads:

"At intersections where traffic is controlled by traffic signals or by police officers drivers of vehicles shall yield the right of way to pedestrians crossing or those who have started to cross the roadway on a green or 'go' signal or signal of a police officer."

The council's substitute for Van Duzer's proposal forbidding pedestrians to cross streets anywhere except at crosswalks was:

"No pedestrian shall use any roadway between intersections when a vehicle is approaching from either direction so as to constitute a hazard for his own safety, or use the same at anytime in a negligent or reckless manner. This section shall not apply to pedestrians using crosswalks."

Ex-D. C. Woman Leaves $79,602 to Cathedral Here

A unique endowment of $79,602 has been left to Washington Cathedral by the will of Mrs. Janette Ida Luqueer Hurlbut, of New York, it was disclosed yesterday.

A small part of the fund will be set aside to build a window in the proposed south transept in memory of her husband, Henry A. Hurlbut. The rest will be used as the first Cathedral endowment exclusively for social service.

Mrs. Hurlbut lived in Washington 20 years ago. She died in New York last May 25. Her last visit to the Cathedral was early last year.

Beware Robert! 'Wahoo' Is on His Way to Hollywood

The Washington Zoo's famous baboon, "Wahoo" is on his way to Hollywood to go in the movies, Dr. William A. Mann, Zoo director said last night.

He said the baboon, an attraction at the zoo for three years, would play in M-G-M pictures.

"Wahoo" first won fame by tearing up the hat of the late Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, of Washington. Recently he lost favor when he bit the hand of a young girl who reached into his cage.

Bids to Be Asked Feb. 1 On Jefferson Memorial

With completion of the $384,900 foundation for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial expected by late spring, the National Park Service was planning yesterday to ask bids February 1 for construction of the superstructure, expected to cost $2,500,000.

Forest Hills Citizens Honor Wheelers

Senator and Mrs. Wheeler, of Montana, were honor guests last night at the annual dinner of the Forest Hills Citizens Association at Columbia Country Club.

Three of the five presidents that have headed the association attended. They were Edward Potter, second president; L. A. Carruthers, fourth president, now president of the District Federation of Citizens Associations, and Mrs. Clarence Wright, president now.

Regular Wages Urged for Porters At Union Station

Demands that the redcap porters at Union Station receive a regular wage, and that tips be regarded either as marks of special service or be abolished entirely, were made at a meeting of the Women's Trade Union League in the Y. W. C. A. Building last night.

Dallas W. Smythe, chief economist of the Wages and Hours Board, said the terminal had agreed redcaps were employes, but that, in a recent ruling by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the status of tips was not cleared up. Until this was done, he said, tipping could be regarded as salary in the porters' case.

Jewish Center Workers Sign Up 1,000 Members

The first 1,000 members have been signed up in the Jewish Community Center's membership drive, volunteer workers were told by Chairman Burnett Siman at a rally at the Center last night.

To help the drive teams attain their goal of 2,500 members, Siman announced the postponement of the closing date until February 8. A dinner dance will be held at the Mayflower Hotel on this date to celebrate the completion of the campaign.

The third of a series of institutes on Jewish history will be held tonight at the Center. Rabbi Henry Segal of the Fourteenth Street Synagogue will speak on "The Wandering Jew of the Middle Ages."

God's Highway Straight Road, Says Evangelist

No Detours En Route To Heaven, MacDonald Tells Baptists

"There are no detours on God's highway," declared Walter MacDonald, renowned evangelist, last night at National Baptist Memorial Church, where he is conducting a two weeks' campaign.

Youthful, fiery, vigorous, of the "Billy" Sunday type, MacDonald told the crowd of more than 600 men, women and children:

. . . "We are to remember that Jesus Christ is the driver on God's highway, and if we let him drive without a backseat driver, it'll be smooth riding and a safe arrival in heaven's golden destination . . .

. . . "Once we're started on this road we'll find obstacles, danger signs, stop-look-listen signs, but it's a straightened road, always in the best of condition, and God does not intend that any traveling this road should ever leave the main highway . . .

. . . "God owns Heaven and God has furnished the way and gives us the directions. The Bible is God's road map of Heaven's highway."

The revival, which ends Saturday night, is being sponsored by the Laymen's Evangelical Association, which backed the Gipsy Smith drive. William Bond is chairman. A "youth rally" will be held Friday night.

2 Girls Use Wits To Trap Pair in Poor Box Robbery

Quick-wittedness on the part of two 8-year-old girls yesterday led to the arrest of two men who robbed the poor box of Church of the Nativity, 6000 Georgia avenue northwest.

The girls, Antonina Haddaway and Margaret Ford, were praying before the altar when they heard a noise behind them. They saw two youths rob the poor box. When the thieves walked out the children followed them for a block, marked down the tag number of their auto and handed it over to Private Frank Keyser.

The two youths were taken into custody.

Hearing Soon In House on D. C. Tax Bill

Slated for Next Week By Rep. Nichols; To Act Despite Sen. Overton's Plan

The House District Committee will proceed with the task of drafting a new District tax bill, it was indicated yesterday, despite the suggestion of Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, that it await enactment of his fiscal formula measure, as yet not introduced.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who is slated to handle the revenue bill, said he will start public hearings next week, and that he doesn't believe more than a week of testimony will be necessary.

"We have gone over the ground time and again," he said, "and everybody is familiar with the problems and the issues."

Nichols Opposes Increase

Nichols, while explaining that he was not suggesting what the Senate might do, said he believes the present Federal payment to the District is adequate, and would oppose any increase.

Senator Overton, who as chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, has worked out a new formula for Federal payments, suggested that the District tax bill be held up until Congress had time to act on his measure, due to be offered within a few days.

He pointed out that the tax report recently submitted by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation assumes that the Federal payment will remain at $5,000,000

Under his formula, based on the amount of tax-exempt land held by the Federal Government within the District, the Federal payment would be about 20 per cent of the general revenue fund in the District supply bill each year.

Would Amount to 8 Million

For 1940 that would mean that the Federal payment would amount to $8,000,000 as the general revenue fund appropriations recommended by the Budget Bureau aggregate $40,000,000.

Because of the House's traditional opposition to any increase in the Federal share in the District's budget, the Overton measure is expected to find little support in the House. Even in the Senate, which has usually stood for more generous fiscal treatment of the District, there have been indications of opposition.

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, has said that he believes the $5,000,000 payment adequate and intimated that he would not support Overton's proposal.

The House District Committee will hold its organization meeting this morning at which time subcommittees will be named. Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and David McCoach will be present upon special invitation of Chairman Randolph.

February Announced as A 'Festival Month'

Loew's Capitol Lines Up Many Stage Stars; More Notables to Attend Birthday Celebrations; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THE lineup of stage, screen and radio stars articled for early appearances on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater is so imposing that it has moved Master J. Raypun Bell—no relation—in charge of puffilicity and advertising for the loewcal Loew houses to designate February as a "Festival Month" on F street. There seems to be some justification for the effervescent young cymbal-whanger's enthusiasm.

BELL

This so-called "parade of personalities" at the Capitol will be led off, in a manner of speaking, by that peculiarly staccato comedian, Roscoe Ates, the world's champion stammerer, who will headline the vaudeville portion of the entertainment scheduled for the Capitol for the week beginning Friday. Mr. Ates, who happens, by some miracle of geographical prescience to have married a "home-town gal"—this column comes from a small town in Indiana, upon which Mr. Ates must have stumbled at one time or another more or less by accident—has stuttered his way into Washington popularity on both stage and screen, long since. Besides that, he plays one tune reasonably well on a fiddle. It will be fun to have Mr. Ates back in town again. But he is only the beginning.

Hot on the heels, to coin a phrase, of the syncopated conversationalist will come Blue Barron and his celebrated radio and recording orchestra, Count Berni Vici and his all-girl orchestra and revue, Benny Davis and his 1939 "Star-Dust Revue," which will enlist the services of Benny's latest discoveries among the juvenile ranks of potentially stellar performers, and Dave Apollon's revue. Definite dates for these various attractions, as yet, have not been finally determined, but they all are on the booking sheets and will be coming along in some order or other.

Orchestra Not Heard Here Before

Blue Barron's Orchestra never before has appeared in the National Capital. They have, however, been consistently listed among the leaders in national popularity and their records have sold 'way up there. Count Berni Vici, who invests his productions with a fine degree of beauty, talent and color, promises Washington something in the nature of a treat. Dave Apollon, of course, is a known quality. Recognized as one of the most astute showmen in the business, Dave always "puts on a show." The same may be said of Benny Davis. Benny, of late years, rather has succeeded to the position once held by the revered Gus Edwards as the greatest discoverer of embryo talent lurking in the traditional wings of the theater. He always may be relied upon to turn up some two, or three, or four youngsters who later will be heard from on marquees in electric lights—as note Martha Raye, Buddy Ebsen and his sister, now retired, and so many others that there is no room to rename them all here.

Perhaps Master J. Raypun Bell—no relation—is right about that "Festival Month."

Lila Damita Will Accompany Husband to Balls

Lili Damita, one of the most glamorous stars—and I still hate that word "glamorous," which is probably why I keep on using it—who has brought a unique personality from Europe to the American cinema, will attend the President's Birthday Celebrations in the Capital next Monday night, January 30. In private life, Miss Damita is the wife of Errol Flynn, who is expected to "beat the gun" and arrive in Washington today to ride in the Horse Show planned and supervised by Col. Patton, at Fort Myer, Va.

Miss Damita has appeared with distinction on the New York stage as well as before the Hollywood cameras and microphones. As a screen star she is equally famed on both sides of the Atlantic. She and Mr. Flynn met aboard ship when Errol was coming to America for his film debut on this side. They were married that same year, which happens to have been 1935. Since then, she has been devoting her time principally to the domestic conduct of the Flynn menage, accepting only such screen assignments as have particularly appealed to her sense of fitness and the urge to act.

The addition of Miss Damita to the list of visiting stars raises the representation of the Warner Brothers' studios to four—George Brent and Bruce Cabot, in addition to Mr. Flynn and Miss Damita. Many other studios are sending stellar luminaries along to add luster to this magnificent humanitarian gesture, in which Washington always has occupied the forefront among the other leading cities of the country—Annabelle, from Twentieth Century-Fox; Ralph Bellamy, from Columbia; Jean Hersholt, and all the others who have been announced.

There are still important announcements to be made as to the contributions of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount in the matter of stellar attendance. The sum total of the Hollywood representation will, I think, exceed that of any previous year—unless the studios, of a sudden, have a revulsion of feeling, as was the case with David O. Selznick, who canceled Olivia de Havilland at the last minute, because after delaying production of "Gone With the Wind" for three years he couldn't see his way clear to hold it up another day or two.

At any rate, Miss Damita will be here with Errol Flynn and that, in classic language, "is something."

Le Baron's Tango-Rhumba Band Coming to Town

Latin-America will pay tribute to President Roosevelt by way of its world famous maestro Eddie LeBaron, who through courtesy of the Rockefeller Center Rainbow Room atop Radio City, will appear with his Rainbow Room Orchestra at the President's Birthday Celebration Ball to be held in the Willard Hotel. Later that evening he will play at the gold plate dinner in the Carlton Hotel.

The LeBaron Orchestra in addition to being one of the country's foremost, is also noted as being the finest tango-rhumba band in both Americas. Their current engagement in the world famous Rainbow Room is in its twenty-second record breaking month. Previously they were in New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel for 20 weeks, having come from Hollywood's Cocoanut Grove, at the Hotel Ambassador after 56 consecutive weeks.

Mr. LeBaron played a prominent part in the series of international broadcasts sponsored by the National Broadcasting Co. directed to the Latin American countries in conjunction with the President's "Friendly Neighbor Policy."

Eddie LeBaron's background is an amazing one. Born in Mexico 32 years ago of a wealthy industrial family, he attended private schools there in preparation for his entrance to the Clason Point Military Academy from which he was graduated, finishing his studies in the great universities of Europe under private tutors. During and after his studies he lived and traveled extensively in France, Italy, the near Orient and the major portions of South America, thus enabling him to speak six languages fluently.

Interested in motion pictures, LeBaron went to California to study at the University of Southern California. It was here that he became interested in introducing Latin American music and dances to North America.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Mr. Nathan Brown will pack his trunks this week and hie to Detroit where he has business. The nature of his business there is a bit vague. Natie says he is going to Detroit for a fight with Tony Galento on February 3, but other folks are suspicious. They admit that he will undoubtedly enter the ring against Galento, but they are not positive that it will be a fight.

POVICH.

For this affair with Galento, Brown is taking leave of his Thirteenth street beanery and hauling himself out of pugilistic retirement. He has flexed his muscles a couple of dozen times, has galloped three times around the block and says he is in shape. He says, furthermore, that he will not be taking a dive for Galento.

"Why should I go into the tank for him?" demands Natie. "Galento is one guy I can lick. Look in the record books. I beat him back in 1932 . . . gave him an awful pasting in Pittsburgh. It didn't mean much then, but if I beat him now, I am a big shot."

Explains That Knockout

Natie was reminded that almost directly beneath the notation of Galento's ten-round defeat by Brown in the record books was another item under Galento's record. It read: "Winner by knockout—over Natie Brown, one round, 1932."

"Sure, everybody knows about that one," said Natie. "Sure, it was a one-round knockout. He stopped me, but it was an accident. Butted me with his head and opened a cut over my eye. That's liable to happen when you fight a clown like Galento. He has to jump to reach a guy's chin. He jumped and banged me on the eye with his iron head. The referee saw a little blood and got scared and stopped the fight."

Natie has a ready explanation for the fact that he was matched with Galento at a time when seemingly Tony merely had to coast in to a fight with Baer or Nova or Louis. "They've got to keep that guy fighting to keep him in shape," said Natie. "If he don't keep training he puts on 5 pounds a day. They're trying to give him somebody soft so he can keep in shape, and so they pick on me. Will they be surprised?"

I didn't know whether they'd be surprised or not, but Natie said they would. "Herman Taylor's the real manager of Galento," Natie was saying. "Everybody thinks Joe Jacobs has got Tony, but that ain't true. Taylor, the Philly promoter, owns the biggest piece of him. Jacobs is only a front-man. I know. Taylor. He is a great friend of Jimmy La Fontaine and I go up to Philly with Jimmy to see all of Taylor's fights. He sees me smoking cigars all the time and maybe taking a snort or two and he figures I'm outa shape and matched me with Galento. He don't know I smoke cigars all my life and take a snort or two since I was 15.

Dispenses With Manager

"Besides, they never did have Galento out in Detroit. And I'm a good drawing card in Detroit. That's where I stayed ten rounds with Joe Louis. They like me out there. We'll draw $25,000 and little Natie will do all right for himself."

For the first time in ten years, it seems, Natie will not be paying out one-third of his purse to a manager. The Galento fight he arranged by himself. Billy McCarney, his manager for a decade, is in Germany campaigning Steve Dudas, and Brown is doing his own business.

"Why should I cut McCarney in?" demands Natie. "For years I have been booking my own fights and giving him 33 per cent for no reason at all. Soft life for these managers. Anyway, McCarney's doing all right over there with Hitler. He got a $15,000 gate for Steve Dudas against Schmeling. He can't take any of that dough out of the country, though, so it looks like he's going to spend the rest of his life in Germany living comfortable."

If the price is right, according to Natie, he'll grab up the odds they'll be offering against him at Detroit. "I always bet on myself," he explains, "if it looks like a good gamble. In Boston I got $1,200 for fighting Tony Shucco. I took $250 at 5 to 2, from the smart guys and when they cut the odds to 3 to 2 on Shucco I took $500 more. I win more'n $1,200 on that fight besides my purse when I licked Shucco."

No Plan of Battle

Natie will carry no plan of battle into his affair with Galento. Mr. Brown is a man of sudden decisions. He never made a more sudden decision than the sudden decision he made one evening in New York at the ringside of the Carnera-Louis fight in 1935. Natie had come down to New York that evening from Carnera's camp, where he had been a sparring partner for the vast Venetian. An old friend in the press box had button-holed Natie and was asking him his opinion of Carnera's chances.

Said Natie: "Louis will paste Carnera out of there inside of six rounds, believe me, I know. I was in the ring every day with that bum Carnera."

Just then two characters known as Owney Madden and Will Duffy, who owned a piece of Carnera, became interested in what Natie was saying. They didn't like it a bit and their eyes narrowed. Natie, who did not wish to become involved with such as Madden and Duffy in any sort of difference of opinion, finally blurted out:

"Of course, what I mean is that Carnera will belt that bum Louis outa there if the fight goes more than six rounds."

Eastern, Roosevelt Win Close Games In School Series

White Tide Tops Central, 18-16; Riders Overcome Tech, 24-22, in Overtime Battles Before 1,200 Spectators

By Bill Burnett.

Once again the elusiveness of Lenny (Stretch) Mills, Eastern High pivot man, proved the undoing of an opponent yesterday as the defending champions in the interhigh basketball race eked out an 18-16 victory over Central in 40 seconds of an overtime session. The other half of the twin bill played at Roosevelt was won by the home team over McKinley in almost as thrilling a finish as the opener, 24 to 22.

A capacity crowd of 1,200 watched the games.

Mills, closely guarded until the closing minutes by Quidley, of Central, broke away soon after the opening of the extra period and hit the basket with an overhand pivot throw. Quidley had gone out a few minutes before the end of the regular time with four personal fouls.

Takes Scoring Honors

The winning 2 points were Mills' seventh and eighth of the game, earning individual scoring honors for the transfer from Tech. Second place went to Len Sokol, of the losers, with 7 points.

Consensus of observers was that Eastern hardly deserved to win the game, its second straight in the series. And until late in the final period Central seemed to have the game on ice. It lead, 4 to 3, at the first quarter, 11 to 7 at the half, and 12 to 10 after the third quarter. Quidley and Sokol had kept the Mount Pleasanters well ahead until some new inspiration hit the White Tide.

A 16-to-12 deficit of the Easterners was pared in two, with four minutes of the game remaining, by George Adrian, substitute forward. Capt. Howard Hancock knotted the count soon afterward with a one-handed set shot, and thus the score stood when the whistle blew. Mills' floor-length dribble and fast shot ended matters.

Another Overtime Clash

The Eastern-Central clash was the second to go into extra minutes in succession in interhigh play. Roosevelt and Tech, playing the finale, threatened to stretch it to three straight. Though the Riders rolled up comfortable margins on several occasions, Tech's Mighty Midgets

Eastern Captain Faces Dilemma

Capt. "Soup" Hancock, Eastern High veteran, was unable to play his best brand of basketball in the first half of Eastern's game with Central yesterday. He was worried.

He had told his brother, with whom he lives, that he had enough scholastic credits to graduate in February, but found out recently that it will take another semester. Fearing his brother would force him to quit school anyway, "Soup" failed to tell him before the game. At halftime he had become so fretful that he decided to confess. The brother, one of four in the Hancock family, gave him permission to finish the year, and "Soup" played the final half with his mind at rest.

Dutch Leonard Signs for '39; Pay Boosted

Knuckle Ball Hurler Seventh in League In Effectiveness

Emil (Dutch) Leonard, obviously content with an increase in salary, yesterday returned his signed contract for the 1939 season to the Nats. He is the twenty-second Washington player to accept terms.

The big, baldish Leonard earned his pay raise by establishing himself as a valued member of the Washington club in his first season with the Nats. He won only 12 games last season against 15 defeats, but a generous share of his beatings were by scant margins and because of a woeful lack of batting support.

It was revealed last month by the official league averages that Leonard, despite his pitching percentage of .444, was seventh among the league's pitchers in earned run averages. He ranked only slightly below Lefty Gomez with an earned run average of 3.43 per game.

Obtained from the Atlanta club in the draft, Leonard made good immediately with the Nats, displaying a knuckle ball that was rated the best in the league last year. He turned in the greatest single pitching performance of any Washington hurler when he beat Bobby Feller, 1-0, in a 13-inning duel.

Leonard will report to the Nats' Orlando, Fla., training camp on March 1, with the squad of veteran pitchers and catchers.

School for Blind Has Four-Team Hockey League

Brantford, Ont., Jan. 24 (Canadian Press)—The Ontario School for the Blind has a hockey league.

The boys who are totally blind use a tin can for a puck and follow it up by the sound.

Those who have slight vision use a regular puck.

The league of four teams developed from skating which the school took up some time ago. "We haven't had a serious hospital case in 18 months," Principal H. J. Vallentyne said today.

Hatfields, McCoys Renew Family Feud on Court

Matewan, W. Va., Jan. 24.—The Hatfields and the McCoys, whose rifles crackled in a deadly feud a generation ago, are going to shoot it out again—this time on a basketball floor.

The McCoys, boasting of their sharpshooting, challenged. And the Hatfields, who always figured their aim was pretty good, accepted.

So tomorrow night they're going to start shooting (baskets) in the Magnolia High School gymnasium as a preliminary to a high school game.

The captain of the McCoys—all six-footers—is Sam McCoy. He said other probable starters are Bob, Joe, Bill and Bay McCoy, all descendants of the family which made West Virginia history.

Capt. Glen Hatfield conceded the Hatfields couldn't boast a team so tall, but recalled that the Hatfields had dominated school teams in the district for many years. He said his starting line-up would be bona-fide members of the clan, and bear the name "Hatfield."

With about everybody in the district related to one or the other family, the whole town has taken sides—openly.

Wilson Tires As Anzelone Gets Decision

Bob Almost Loses by K. O. in 4th Round Of Bruising Struggle

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Bob Wilson's attempted comeback ended ingloriously where it began a scant month ago—in a six-round bout at Turner's Arena last night, when he lost to Larry Anzelone, of New York, in a gory, exciting fight.

Packing 144¾ pounds to his opponent's 145½, the blond veteran held his own throughout the earlier part of the milling, but wilted in the last two sessions. The bounding Italian never gave him a chance to land his lethal left, the weapon Wilson depended on to carry him to victory.

Anzelone almost knocked out Wilson in the fourth round, catching him with a series of punishing rights and lefts to the head that opened a jagged wound above Bob's right eye. He staggered him with his right, but Wilson managed to last the round.

Wilson grew stronger in the sixth and final session and peppered the New Yorker with several good rights to the head as Anzelone made no effort to reopen the gash over Wilson's eye in the last two rounds, although it was obvious that one more blow to the damaged sector would mean a technical knockout for him.

Tommy Hoover (136), of Washington, hit the canvas for the first time in his bout with Billy Corrigan (135), of Baltimore, who knocked him down twice in the fourth and once in the fifth in chalking up a unanimous decision.

Joe Perry (137), of Washington, used a long left jab to advantage in pounding out a decision over Joe Koheler (134), of Baltimore. Koheler came to life in the fourth round and opened up a nasty gash over Perry's left eye with a smashing overhand right. Perry however, held his own in the fifth and sixth rounds to save the fight.

Frankie Wills (136), scored a unanimous decision over Mike Martingo (136), of Baltimore, in the 6-round semifinal. Wills forced the fighting and landed frequently with telegraphic rights to the side of Martingo's head.

Baseball Writers Vote Trio Places In Hall of Fame

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 24.—The names of George Sisler, Eddie Collins and Wee Willie Keeler today were added to baseball's hall of fame as a tabulation of ballots in the Baseball Writers Association fourth annual poll revealed each had received more than the 75 per cent of votes necessary for inclusion in the list of diamond greats.

The triple play by the scribes swelled to 19 the list of heroes of yesteryear whose names will be immortalized in the baseball shrine at Cooperstown, N. Y. Twelve were selected by the writers and seven were named by the centennial committee made up of Judge K. M. Landis, Will Harridge, American League president, and Ford C. Frick, National League head.

C. U. Loses 7th In Row, 57-63, To Mount Five

Kokie Leads Attack For Mt. St. Mary's, Scoring 22 Points

By Jack Munhall.

After an early scare, Catholic University last night preserved its imperfect basketball record by yielding to a strong Mount St. Mary's five by a score of 57-36 on the C. U. court.

To the mild consternation of some 750 fans, the Cardinals got off to an inauspicious start, trailing by only 5-6 in the first 2 minutes of play. But once the red-clad Brookland boys hit their true stride they managed their seventh loss in as many games with a minimum of trouble.

To rosy-cheeked Stan Kokie, the Mounts' co-captain and All-Maryland Sate guard last season, goes a large portion of the credit for helping C. U. maintain its amazing record of consistency. For the curly-haired little Kokie dropped in ten field goals and a pair of foul shots to score 22 points in one of the greatest exhibitions of set-shooting witnessed here in recent years.

Six Out of Six

During one stretch in the second half Kokie let fly six times from near midcourt at difficult angles. And six times the ball swished in the basket, neglecting to touch the backboard or even the rim. To Kokie also go the Cardinals' thanks for his all-around cleverness as a ball-handler and ball hawk. For on no fewer than three occasions did the exceptionally fleet Kokie snatch an errant C. U. pass and dribble hastily to scores.

Kokie, too, seemed to radiate friendliness which, no doubt, prompted the Cardinal players to hand him the ball when he was unable to get it on his own account. In short, Mr. Kokie was of no little help in preserving the Cardinals' record.

Mount St. Mary's, victorious in six of eight starts, presented one of the better teams to show here this season. Not as polished as Roanoke nor as flashy as St. Francis or Ohio University, the Mounts nevertheless were quite adept at putting the ball

17,000 Are Expected To Watch Joe Louis Risk Title Tonight

Gate for First All-Colored Heavyweight Fight in Quarter of a Century Should Reach $100,000; Joe Heavy Choice

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 24.—Installed as a prohibitive favorite, at odds as high as 1 to 10, Joe Louis puts his world heavyweight boxing championship on the line for the fifth time tomorrow night against John Henry Lewis in Madison Square Garden.

They meet over the 15-round route, and indications are for a crowd of about 17,000 contributing to a gross gate of $100,000 for the first all-Negro heavyweight title clash in a quarter century.

So highly is Louis held that the betting fraternity reports little interest in wagering. The odds, hitherto placed at 1 to 6 and 7, have skyrocketed to a point where a Lewis victory tomorrow, however improbably regarded, would go down as one of the most astonishing upsets in ring history. In most quarters the Brown Bomber, who has revived interest in the heavyweight division for the first time since Dempsey and Tunney, is quoted at odds of 1 to 3 to score a knockout.

Joe will go into the ring at about 10 p. m. (E. S. T.) sporting a weight advantage of 15 or more pounds. Trained to as fine a condition as for any previous fight—although not in the same "killer" frame of mind as the night he chopped Max Schmeling to defeat last summer—the champion will scale just about 200 pounds. John Henry, who only recently abdicated the light-heavyweight throne, figures to tip the beam at 185 or less.

Veteran ring observers, their minds made up that Lewis is past his prime and can't hope to cope with the most dangerous puncher since Dempsey, asked each other today only "what round?" Generally, the opinion was for a knockout in less than ten rounds, with the seventh as the number most often predicted.

There had been some faint hope that John Henry's boxing skill and the ring experience he has gained in 99 pervious fights would enable him to last the distance against the force of Joe's jolting dynamite. But those who have watched both fighters in their training quarters in recent days now feel that would be whistling in the dark.

Louis' punching power is as explosive as ever, while John Henry, although the best boxer among the big fellows today—and probably the best Joe ever has faced—doesn't have the artillery to go along with it.

The lure Louis holds for the fight public still exists, as evidenced by the manner in which the ticket sale has been maintained in recent days. Although at first inclined to believe the gate would be about $80,000, Promoter Mike Jacobs now feels the Brown Bomber from Detroit will continue his record of never having fought before a house of less than $100,000 in Madison Square Garden. His three previous Garden appearances were against Paulino Uzcudun, Bob Pastor and Mann.

Meade Rides 4 Winners, Including Hialeah Feature Race

Francesco Triumphs in Turf Race

'Comeback' Jockey Outrides Yarberry; Takes Day's Last On Short Distance

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 24.—Jockey Don Meade, shut out of the winner's circle yesterday, came back with a vengeance today when he rode four winners, including the day's feature race. The last of his quartet of successes came in the day's closing event when he piloted Short Distance to the wire ahead of the field.

Showing the same liking for the turf course that he displayed last winter, Francesco, representing the Darby Dan Farm of John W. Galbreath, of Galloway, Ohio, easily won the featured Venetian Purse under Meade's handling. Tightened by a race over the main course about two weeks ago the Jacopo gelding defeated Herbert M. Woolf's Joe Schenck, the choice, by a length and a half. The winner paid $8.20.

Francesco stepped the mile and a sixteenth of the grass course in 1:46 2-5.

Yarberry Outridden

Warren Yarberry was unable to match the ability of Don Meade when Joe Schenck was challenged by Francesco in the stretch. Joe Schenck wore down Lassator after the first half mile and looked a winner as he opened up a daylight lead. Francesco, rated third to the stretch, made his winning charge after the last turn. He collared Joe Schenck entering the final furlong and had no trouble drawing away. The winner qualified for Saturday's Miami Beach Handicap, which will be decided on the grass.

Predicate, a gelded son of Insco from Herbert M. Woolf's Woolford Farm, made his first start a winning one in the three-furlong opener. Grouped in the field, Predicate broke with the leaders from an outside position and waged a stirring duel with the favored Hi Gold. The latter held a narrow advantage entering the last furlong but finally allowed his rival to gain a half-length decision in a blanket finish.

Sculptress showed a promising effort to finish third, another half-length back, while Ballyhaste closed a big gap, winding up just out of the picture. The field players collected $6.40 for $2 and the time was 0:34 4-5.

Meade Rides Sungino

Don Meade returned to winning form in the second race when he booted Sungino, the $6.50 for $2 choice, to an easy score. Ted Easy followed the victor home, four lengths behind, while Nicholas S. lost the place by a length. Sungino, nicely rated most of the way, bounded to the front when called upon and just breezed through the stretch, completing the seven furlongs in 1:25 2-5.

It was No. 3 for Meade when his mount in the sixth race, Clap In, easily outfooted five other $2,500 platers over the mile and a furlong distance. Dark Beau, beaten three lengths, took second money by four lengths, with Toni third. Clap In, a $5.20-for-$2 favorite, rushed to the front and never hesitated. Dark Beau was blocked when he tried to get through rounding out of the backstretch. He closed gamely but was no match for Clap In.

Meade brought Short Distance home at $4.70 in the eighth race.

At The Post

Hialeah Park, Jan. 24.

Dear Al:

It's a far cry from being suspended for racing irregularities and being offered the mount on the country's No. 1 horse in the country's No. 1 race. That is the difference a few weeks have made in the life of Jockey Don Meade. The square-shouldered young man, who made racing officials' ears burn when they tapped his phone wire a couple of winters ago, yesterday turned down a chance to ride Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap. I doubt very much if the Seabiscuit people thought they had a chance to get Meade. He is under contract to Trainer George Odom, who has Pasteurized and Sir Damion scheduled to parade postward in Hialeah's $50,000 Widener on the same day as the big West Coast battle March 4. If Meade was not under contract, he would be making a poor deal if he forsook Florida for California at this time. In the first place, Florida had enough on him at one time, so officials announced, to set him down for life and then let him come back. Then again, Florida is closely associated with New York in racing and if Meade fails to keep his Florida friends he has little or no chance of riding in New York again. Santa Anita could use Meade, not only for the big race but for every race. Meade, in his present excellent riding form, is the best "horse" for purposes of the betting pools that the track has. It has gotten to the point where Meade and not his horse is drawing the heavy money that supplies the life blood of expensive Hialeah Park. If memory serves, Meade has ridden only one race on a big California track. He had the mount on Ted Clark, then a Texas sensation. I talked to him in the jockeys' room just before he took Ted Clark out for the $100,000 race. "This horse of mine is going to be on top. I don't know how long he will stay there, however," said Meade. Ted Clark set a sizzling pace, but after the mile-pole was reached he sagged at the knees and finished a well-beaten fifth. The California offer at this time is a compliment to Meade. The racing commission out there barred more than a dozen riders before Santa Anita opened without giving an explanation. Yet Meade, at whom the finger pointed for a long time, probably would have gotten the O. K. had Owner Howard, with the mighty Seabiscuit as his ace in the hole, obtained his services.

Clocker Mike almost marked time yesterday. He bet $10 to win and $10 to place on Dark Beau and the horse finished second to Don Meade. The place price of $3.70 got back most of Mike's dough but he lost $2.80 and the b. r. is now $365.30. Tomorrow Mike is going to parlay Milk Punch and Jolyon, $4 across the board. BILL.

First race—Ida Rogers showed a fair effort in her racing debut here and seems as good as anything in the opening skirmish over the Nursery course. Pirate Ship, by Hard Tack, is said to have speed and could make it a real battle for the top one. Valinda Babe comes for that stable of fit juveniles that has been cleaning up hereabouts.

Second race—Josh seems ideally placed in this company. This fellow has worked well and may show to advantage after being dropped down a peg. Crowning Glory has a good figure and should not be far out of it. Gurkha was a recent surprise winner.

Third race—Buyer Beware looks like the goods in this field. This one has had a tightener and appears ready to bring home the main portion of the purse. Sugarage won over the track and is dangers. Loveday is due to take a purse soon and is a threat in this company.

Fourth race—Dnieper seems to have found a spot that fits his purposes. Finished a nice third last out and should improve enough to hold these safe. Mansco has done about everything asked and will be right there in the final stages of this. Blind Pig should be close.

Fifth race—Drudgery, despite a high weight assignment, gets my call in this field. This one took a licking by a short margin recently and probably will have better luck this time. Knight Gallant is fit and ready. Orient Express gets in with a feather.

Sixth race—Milk Punch may be the right one in this field. I'm going to string along and make this one the day's special. Isaiah is in excellent form now and must be respected. Go Home to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Lourdes closed with good energy in that last and with a change of riders may take down the chief portion of this purse. Seventh Inning took his last impressively and will be ready to battle it out with Green Melon for the place award.

Eighth race—Jolyon, with Meade scheduled to ride, looks like the goods in the day's finale. Schley Nurse showed a fair race last out. Rebel Yell for the show end.

Best Bet—Milk Punch.

Jockey Litzenberger To Become Trainer

Miami, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP).—Jockey Eddie Litzenberger, following the lead of Earl Sande, decided today to quit riding and become a trainer. He applied for a license and intends to start a stable of his own.

Until this season, Litzenberger had been out of the saddle since 1937, when he broke a leg in a fall at Jamaica.

Havana Card Called Off After Assassination

Havana, Jan. 24 (AP).—Because the funeral of Pedro Acosta, slain mayor of suburban Marianao, was held today the race program at Oriental Park, Havana's leading track, was postponed until tomorrow.

Acosta's body was found yesterday in an abandoned automobile on the outskirts of Madrid with a gunshot wound in the back of his head. Police believed it was a political crime.

Acosta was a Liberal.

N. H. Boosts Racing

Concord, N. H., Jan. 24 (AP).—Without a voice being raised in pro or con a measure calling for a sweeping investigation of pari-mutuel horse race betting in New Hampshire today was killed by the House of Representatives. Defeat of the bill was widely interpreted in legislative circles as indicating that the extension of horse race betting laws will be favored.

Catholic U. Loses Two Boxers for Maryland U. Battles Saturday

Bernstein Is Declared Ineligible

Fought as Freshman; Messuri Out, Broke His Nose in Training

The bantamweight position on Catholic University's boxing team assumed the dubious distinction of a "jinxed" weight last night as the Cardinals lost their only two representatives in that class within a space of a few hours. Their absence, plus the dearth of more experienced material, probably will force Coach Eddie LaFond to Forfeit the 120-pound bout in Saturday's important match with Maryland at College Park.

The team suffered its first stunning blow when Dave Bernstein, temporarily idle because of an attack of boils, was ruled ineligible for further competition by Director of Athletics "Dutch" Bergman. Bernstein, it was disclosed, fought one bout as a freshman, automatically disqualifying himself under southern conference rules. All of Catholic's remaining opponents are in the conference.

Messuri Breaks Nose

Second loss was that of Tony Messuri, promising 127-pounder, who suffered a broken nose in a training joust yesterday afternoon. Messuri was shedding weight to replace Bernstein in the line-up Saturday night, and his going leaves the Cards without an experienced man at either weight.

Bernstein, national intercollegiate bantamweight champion, also is a former national A. A. U. champion at the same weight. A student of high rank in the school of architecture, he took up boxing after enrolling at the Brookland school, and was rated one of the best ringmen ever developed by Coach Eddie LaFond. He was undefeated in two matches this season, having won against Villanova in the inaugural and again last week against Temple.

Highly regarded

He figured prominently in LaFond's plans for the current season, and was considered an almost certain point winner every time he stepped into the ring. Fans were looking forward to his bout with Red Dorr, Maryland bantamweight, for the Old Liner won a wholly unexpected decision over him last year at Brookland, and Bernstein was gunning for revenge. Messuri had pledged himself to avenge his teammate's defeat, but with him on the shelf it appears that Bernstein's rivalry with the redhead will go down in the books under the heading of unfinished business.

Steinbach Lost To Maryland Team

But all of the casualties were not at Brookland, for Heine Miller, Maryland coach, last night reported the loss of Morton Steinbach, light heavyweight, who was sent to the infirmary yesterday with a mild attack of grip. Victor by a knockout in the opening match with Duke University two weeks ago, Steinbach's absence will be keenly felt by the Terps.

Either Bob Lodge or Art Leites will supplant him, although Miller indicated he would not make a choice until Friday at the earliest.

Dragons Beat Exports

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 24.—The Cumberland Dragons rang up their twenty-fourth victory of the season and their tenth in a row when they beat the Hagerstown Old Exports here, 47-34. "Red" Wolford and Bill Schaidt shared 31 of the winners' points.

Mt. Rainier Five Takes 5th Straight

Wilson High Beaten In 23-21 Thriller On Winner's Floor

Mount Rainier High's court stars continued to romp through the opposition yesterday when they registered their fifth straight victory and their seventh in nine starts this season. The Mounties had their hands full, however, with Woodrow Wilson High, and finally tucked away a 23-21 decision.

Wilson got off to a flying start and held a 10-5 advantage at the end of the first period. Mount Rainier came back with a rush and tied the count at 11 points just before the half ended. Mount Rainier then gained a slight lead which it held to the end, never being able to pull more than two points away from its rival.

Roosevelt was off to a powerful start, ringing up five points before Tech tallied at all. Then Eli Blank, Charley Kendall and Jack Walsh swung into action. Their baskets limited Roosevelt to a 9-6 lead after the first 8 minutes, and a 14-12 lead at the half. In the third period the Riders, paced by George West and Hymie Perlo, amassed a 22-16 advantage that appeared good for a victory.

After Roosevelt had missed two tries for single-pointers in the last period, however, Tech began moving with increased confidence, scoring six points while the Riders tallied only two. Several long shots of the Manual Trainers rimmed the basket as the team desperately attempted to knot the 24-22 count against them. Moe Tannebaum, Tech forward, then got the chance that might have tied the score. He was allowed two free throws on George Zuras' holding, but missed with 5 seconds left to play.

It was Roosevelt's second victory and Tech's second loss in the series. Perlo and West tied for point honors with nine apiece. Roosevelt missed eight charity throws, and Tech nine.

Silver Spring Cafe Bowlers Beat Beermen

Arbaugh Tops Team; Accounts Still Top U. S. Housing Race

Hugh Arbaugh, owner of the Silver Spring alleys, led the Shepherd Park Restaurant team to a three-game victory over National Beer that earned second place in the American League for men. Arbaugh shot high set of 382. Hines-Lions took three from Stewart Brothers. Noble Viers' set of 359 being high. E. C. Keys also took three from I. B. E. W. Bill Smith paced the winners with a 364 set.

In the Ladies Suburban League, National Ale took three from the league leaders, R. E. A. Cleaners, and Custom Interiors advanced to third place with three games over Talismans. Grotto Grill and Shaeffer's Florists won three games apiece from Howard and Monument Electric, respectively.

Lucky Strike

Accounts, winning two games from Construction Review, retained first place in the close U. S. Housing League race. George Stahl, Construction Review, posted high individual game of 135. Riley Simmons Accounts, rolled high individual set, 344. Accounts had high team game, 556, and high team set, 1,562.

Despite Meyer Weinberg's high individual game of 144 and high individual set of 382, McKesson & Robbins dropped two games to the Internationals in the Distributors League.

Chevy Chase

The Chargers, led by George Sellabaum, ran off with all the honors in the Liberty Bank League (four-man teams). With Sellabaum taking high individual team and set honors with 132 and 349, the Chargers grabbed high team game and set with 449 and 1,312.

In the Federal Deposits League Robert Cavanaugh, of Bonds, rolled high individual game, 142; Harry Koerbel, high individual set, 361; Overdrafts, high team game, 547, and high team set, 1,579.

In the Bureau of Public Roads League, Fred Jarrell, of Lenox, won high individual game, 127, and high individual set, 327 while Lenox took high team game and high team set with 492 and 1,481.

Arcadia

Ray Watson, Hessick Coal Co., and Joe DiMasi, Jacob's Transfer, tied for high individual game with 154s. Watson's 429 was high individual set for the evening and the league's second high of the season. DiMasi had a 402 set. Hessick's 630 and 1,793 were good for high team game and high team set.

Chaconas Market, winning two from Lucky Five No. 2, went into a first-place tie with Arcadia which lost two to Jacob's Transfer. Hessick Coal won two from Sholl's Cafe and Daly Food Shoppe took a couple from Arcade-Pontiac. Despite losing two games two Arcade-Pontiac shooters posted exceptionally good sets. Joe Freschi turned in a 391 and Harry Aiken a 387.

Hyattsville Girls Nip Mt. Rainier

Hyattsville A. C. girls defeated Mount Rainier last night in the Washington Recreation Basketball League, 16-12. Virginia Miller scored all the points for the losers in the game played on the Hyattsville court.

Fort Myer Horse Show Features 32-Year-Old Mare

Errol Flynn to Ride In Birthday Benefit

One of the last surviving war horses of the A. E. F., Jeanne de Arc, 32-year-old mare, will be one of the special attractions at the President's birthday horse show tonight and tomorrow night at Ft. Myer. Wearing her wound stripe and six combat stars on her service ribbon, the horse will parade before the Chief Executive, Mrs. Roosevelt, and other distinguished guests.

Another featured performer in the show will be Errol Flynn, Hollywood star, who is scheduled to arrive in Washington late this afternoon to ride in the show. The actor is an expert equestrian, and a veteran of many years in the saddle.

JEANNE DE ARC

Jeanne de Arc won her wound stripe at the Somme, where she was injured when a shell struck directly behind her, killing the swing or middle pair of an artillery team. The individual mount of an Artillery Chief of Section, Jeanne went on after being injured, and the artillery team followed after the swing pair was cut out of harness. The famous horse also participated in the engagements at Verdun, Belleau Wood, St. Mihiel, and Blanc Mont.

After the Armistice Jeanne was selected as a member of the American team for the Olympic equestrian game because of her superlative jumping ability. She won scores of trophies and ribbons in horse shows throughout the world and still seems as spry as many younger horses. She is the property of Lieut. Col. John D. Von Holtzendorff, U. S. A.

Proceeds derived from the two shows will go to the fund to fight infantile paralysis.

Handball Tourney At 'Y' in 2d Half

The never ending search for handball talent continues at the Y. M. C. A., with seven youthful players making their first appearance in the first half of the Y's annual handball tourney. The final round of the current tournament began last week and will continue through the week of March 1.

Favorites, with District Champion Jack Schwartz showing the way, took top honors in first-half play. Schwartz swept through the first-half singles play without the loss of a match, then teamed with Paul Pearlman to duplicate the feat in doubles. Capt. George Wandlandt grabbed the No. 2 singles spot, losing only to Schwartz, and then paired with Gustave Goldstein to take the No. 2 doubles ranking.

Schwartz is suffering from an old shoulder injury and will not compete in the final half in either singles or doubles. Players entered for the first time in the tourney are Dave Fox, Tom McNeil, Phil Barsch, Ted Fahrner. Ben Schiffer, Alex Houlon and N. Seidner.

Matches scheduled for tonight: Walter Engelhardt vs. George Wendlandt, Albert Tapper vs. Lionel Moore, Charles Engelhardt vs. Gustave Goldstein, David Fox vs. Tom McNeil, Phil Barsch vs. Ted Fahrner, Ben Schiffer vs. Albert Levin, Wendlandt-Goldstein vs. Seidner-Houlon, Pearlman-J. Payne vs. M. Collins-Levin, and R. Nash-L. Vineberg vs. N. Englehardt-G. Newman.

Bethesda Downs Washington-Lee

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High ended its string of eight straight basketball defeats last night at the Bethesda gym, shutting out Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, Va., in the final half to win, 34-4. Johnny Shumate led the attack with six field goals and a charity toss for 11 points.

D. and H. Cagemen Beat Chambers

The superiority of Delaware and Hudson basketball team over its arch rival, W. W. Chambers, was proved last night in a Heurich League game at the beermen's gym, as D and H. spilled Chambers, 42-33. The Delhuds took a 20-13 lead at the half, but were forced to stretch themselves to the limit in the final half as Chambers made two spirited rallies.

Despite the 24 points scored by George Beach, husky forward, PWA lost the nightcap to Dapper Dan, 46-38. The winners were paced by Ollie Tipton, with 15 points. PWA led in the first half, but saw the score knotted at 16-16 at intermission. Dapper Dan hit its stride in the second half to win fairly easily.

Blair Tramples Sherwood, 49-14

Led by Dot Travis who scored 22 points, the girls of Montgomery Blair High School, of Silver Spring, yesterday defeated the girls of Sherwood High on the losers' floor, 49-14. The game was not close at any time.

James Monday, of Rockville, playing his first game for the Montgomery County quint, led the scoring with 13 points. Costello was high for Gaithersburg with 4.

St. Alban's Five Trips Landon By 21-19 Count

Pete Slingluff Registers Winning Goal in Last Minute; Maloney Stars

A successful test start against one of the teams it will meet in Interstate Academic League cage play was made by St. Alban's yesterday on the home floor as it whipped Landon Prep in the final two minutes of play, 21 to 19.

The eventual winners led throughout the game until Dave Maloney, Landon forward, whipped in a wild overhand shot to knot the count at 19 to 19. St. Alban's Pete Slingluff countered with a long basket and the Saints froze the ball to win.

Maloney was high scorer with 11 points, four of his five field goals being long ones from near the center of the floor. No substitutes were used in the game, only three of Landon's players sharing in the score. All of the Saint basketers contributed points to the victory.

Former Flyweight Champ Unharmed

Glasgow, Scotland, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Benny Lynch, former world flyweight champion, was in satisfactory condition tonight after disappearing from his training camp. Lynch left his camp some time last night and was found wandering on the moor shortly before dawn, suffering from exposure.

Lynch suffered a breakdown after the title was taken from him because he could not make the weight limit last year for his bout with Jackie Jurich, of California.

Special Race to Fick

Buenos Aires, Jan. 24 (AP).—Peter Fick, stellar New York free style swimmer, defeated Luis Alcivar in a special 100-meter free style race as the second session of the Pan-American swimming meet got under way before 6,000 fans tonight.

Bronko Nagurski to Test Terror

Bronko Choice Over Golden Villain as Promoter Prepares For Capacity Crowd

A possible unmasking of the Golden Terror looms tomorrow night at Turner's Arena, where the hooded villian tangles with Bronko Nagurski, former world champion, in the feature bout of an all-star wrestling program.

Not since Laverne Baxter held forth at the arena two years ago has Promoter Joe Turner had a villain of the Terror's stature on his program. In a half dozen matches the Terror has felled several innocent ringside customers, incited two riots of minor proportions, and earned the cordial dislike of everybody from the ticket sellers to the leather-lunged guy in Section A.

Sell-Out Is Likely

So anxious are the fans to see him unmasked, tonight's show threatens to be a sell-out, for Nagurski appears to be one of the few men capable of pinning him. Joe Savoldi is the only gladiator with a decision over the mystery-mauler thus far, but even he couldn't budge the Terror's inky mask.

Nagurski threw Savoldi on his last appearance here when he wore the championship crown. Not long after he lost all claims to the title in a match with Jim Londos at Philadelphia. The one-time all-America fullback wants his regal robes back again, and a comeback attempt has netted seven consecutive victories thus far, and he confidentially expects to chalk up No. 8 tonight at the Terror's expense.

The supporting card includes Tommy O'Toole vs. Chris Zaharias in the 45-minute semifinal. In the 30-minute engagements Pete Peterson faces Red Ryan; Wild Man Zim tangles with Casey Berger, and Dutch Schultz opposes Nick Campofreda.

Gophers Still Ahead Of Rivals in Sports

Minneapolis.—Victories continued to outbalance defeats on the University of Minnesota athletic ledger during the year just ended. All Gopher teams compiled a .638 victory percentage during 1938, winning 76 contests, losing 43 and tieing three. In the Western Conference, Minnesota teams had a .583 percentage with 35 wins, 25 losses and one tie. The football, golf and gymnastic teams won undisputed conference championships and the hockey team shared the Big Ten title with Michigan.

high with 274 ballots. Each voter named 10 candidates. Sisler received 235 votes, Collins was named on 213 ballots, and Keeler received 207 votes, just 1 more than the minimum necessary for election.

A total of 108 players received votes, with 28 nominees drawing more than 25 votes each.

The names of Sisler, Collins and Keeler are additions to a list which already includes Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson, named in the first poll; Napoleon Lajoie, Tris Speaker and Cy Young, named in 1937, and Grover Cleveland Alexander, the lone selection last year.

The centennial committee choices include George Wright, M. G. Bulkeley, Ban Johnson, John J. McGraw, Connie Mack, Henry Chadwick and Alexander Cartwright, all of whom either were active in the game or closely associated with its development.

In addition, the committee will name from five to ten diamond heroes of the nineteenth century between now and the centennial celebration at Cooperstown, June 12.

Sisler Still Busy

The names of Sisler, Collins and Keeler enter every conversation concerning all-time baseball greats. Keeler's quip: "Hit 'em where they ain't" remains a classic phrase. Sisler's booming bat brought him deathless fame, and Collins was the key man in Connie Mack's renowned $100,000 infield. Both Sisler and Collins jumped from college campuses to the majors.

Sisler, now 45 and still about the most active man in baseball as high commissioner of the semipros, was with the St. Louis Browns from 1915 to 1827, with Washington in 1928, and the Boston Nationals from 1928 to 1930, when an eye ailment ended his playing career.

He had a lifetime batting average of .341. In 1922 he hit .420, and became the first player to win the official honor of "most valuable player in the American League."

Collins' career dates back to 1906 when, fresh from Columbia University, he joined the Athletics. He remained with them through 1914, when Mack broke up his $100,000 infield. Collins went to the Chicago White Sox, where he remained until 1926, the last two years as manager.

He returned to Philadelphia in 1927 for three years, and now is vice president and treasurer of the Boston Red Sox. He is 51.

Keeler played with the Baltimore Orioles of the National League from 1894 to 1898, with Brooklyn

from 1899 to 1902, the New York Highlanders from 1903 to 1909 and the New Giants in 1910. He died in 1923.

He was known as the best bunter in the game, and for 14 years he batted better than .300.

Rube Waddell 179, Rogers Hornsby 176, Frank Chance 158, Ed Delahanty 145, Ed Walsh 132, Johnny Evers 107, Miller Huggins, 97, Rabbit Maranville 82, Jimmie Collins 72, Roger Bresnahan 67, Fred Clarke 59, Mordecai Brown 54, Wilbert Robinson 46, Chief Bender 40, Herb Pennock 40, Ray Schalk 35, Hugh Duffy 34, Ross Young 34, Hugh Jennings 33, Joe McGinnity 32, Home Run Baker 30, Addie Joss 28, Eddie Plank 28, Mickey Cochrane 28, and Frank Frisch 26.

Feller Surprised At Speed Report

Delray Beach, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP).—Bob Feller, Cleveland Indians' pitching star, expressed surprise today at a Georgia Highway Patrol report that a man arrested on a speeding charge last week near Calhoun, Ga., had given his name.

He said he had driven over that route on his way by motor car to Florida, but had not been arrested.

The record in Georgia Highway Patrol headquarters listed "Robert Feller, of Adel, Iowa," and charged him with doing 70 miles an hour on U. S. Highway No. 41. A fine of $10 was assessed by Gordon County Ordinary B. F. Whittemore Thursday.

Kokie and his mates, particularly Tony Apichella, a guard, and 6-foot, 220-pound Luke Savage, the center and Joe Karpinski, a forward, were shooters of the first order, either on the standard pot, snowbirds or the circus type. Savage and Karpinski with 10 points each, and Apichella, with 9, were the other heavy scorers, besides Kokie.

Catholic University, although still very weak defensively, showed marked improvement, especially in the first half. With Wayne Ambrose playing for the team instead of for Ambrose the Cardinals worked the ball well, and had not many well-aimed shots rimmed the basket or bounced out they would have fared better in the final score.

Gene Daly, former Western High School star, popped up in the accustomed role of scoring leader for the Cards, his five field goals and two fouls being three points more than Ambrose made. Daly, incidentally, made four consecutive long shots.

In a preliminary, the Catholic University freshmen made it unanimous for the alma mater by losing to the Washington Boys Club unlimited team, 27-29.

Rockville Quint Whips County Foe

Getting away to an 18-2 advantage by halftime, the courtmen of Richard Montgomery High, of Rockville, completely outclassed their upper county opponents, Gaithersburg, in a game yesterday on the losers courts, 37-14.

Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

CANDID CAMERA: At Wardman's Metronome Room: Sequel to "Congress Dances," including Michigan's new Congressman, Representative Fred Bradley and Mrs. Bradley, Representative and Mrs. James H. Fay, Representative and Mrs. Laurence F. Arnold, Representative and Mrs. Edward E. Cox, also (for the third time in a week), pretty Katherine Overton, daughter of Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton.

At Mayfair: Mrs. Elmer Thomas (wife of Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma,) hostessing a late afternoon dove party that took especial delight in the caroling of Mayfair's Louanna. Senator Thomas was a schoolmate of Louanna's father and mother. Movie Expert Bryant Washburn was a Mayfair-er later in the evening.

At the Carlton: White House Secretary Marguerite Le Hand crossing the luncheon path of FHA Administrator Stewart McDonald, who gallantly held the dining room door open for her as he passed out. Also petite Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan anticipating the lovely springtime in a head-to-toe costume of pale beige.

At the Hi Hat: Champion Tennists Donald Budge and Ellsworth Vines partaking of a carefully chosen luncheon before their match at College Park.

MAGIC DRINKABLES: Magician Otis Manning and his magic pitcher will fly into the Lounge Riviera on Monday evening. From his magic pitcher (containing apparently nothing but water) Otis will pour any drink you name right at your table. Bacardis, Martinis, sidecars, Scotch and sodas—they're all poured out of the same pitcher, guaranteed to be authentic and properly mixed. Will these magic drinks be on the house? Well-l, now, we really wouldn't know. You'd better make inquiries before you ask Otis to pour the fifth one.

PALL MALL TO PRESS CLUB: When Mary De Sibour (Pall Mall Room) sings at the Press Club dinner on Saturday evening she will warble "Summertime" and "Ain't Necessarily So," both from "Porgy and Bess," also the new "My Heart Belongs to Daddy."

SUGAR MARIMBA: Sweet as sugar cane are the rhythms of Joaquin Garcia's Marimbas, new attraction in Shoreham's Blue Room and cocktail lounge. The artfully assembled group includes two marimbas, guitar, accordion and bass doubling with maracas. Maestro Barnee, the ever alert, is now sponsoring the "Chestnut Tree," new dance invented by the creator of the "Lambeth Walk," C. L. Heimann.

BAMBOO IN BLOOM: Those premier little troupers, Bamboo Garden's Cocktail Shakers, are offering new dances from their apparently inexhaustible repertoire. Most arresting is the march-tap dance they do to "Poet and Peasant." Proof of the Cocktail Shakers' smartness is the fact that they have worked 49 out of the last 52 weeks, something of a record for a night spot revue. Their current Bamboo engagement marks their first Eastern appearance in two years. All of the girls were guests of honor at a Sunday afternoon cocktail party given by Mrs. Helen Pastnyck, cousin of Doris Lee, tiny blonde of the group. Bamboo's new stars, Alcaro and Roberta, dance a la Mexican-can. N. B. Two of Bamboo's recent star acts, the Kim Loo Sisters and Johnny Barnes, are starring, respectively at the Earl and Capitol Theaters. A proof of what we already knew, that manager Huey Liang is a topping entertainment picker.

Bill Strickland and his Dixieland Swingers, who are swinging high for the Lotus' eleventh anniversary week

PIRATES' REHEARSAL: With the Pirate's Den rapidly approaching completion, Capt. Don Dickerman is promising to toss a couple of "rehearsal parties" for the public in advance of the formal opening. Let's all go up and walk the plank!

EDUCATIONAL DERBY: Al Simmonds says he is going to turn the Brown Derby into a college—of nut dynamics. Al will be the prexy and George, the dean. Dinners will be served at recess. Raise your hand during the study hour and you'll be served a drink.

LOTUS GROWS UP: Eleventh Anniversary Week is being celebrated at Lotus with a hey-nonny-nonny! a hot-cha-cha! and many huzzas. Buddy Shaner is singing hit songs dating from 1937 to 1939. If you have a pet oldtime hit song, tell Maestro Bill Strickland and he'll add it to Buddy's concert.

The Toyland Revue girls offer new numbers, all honeys, including a fishing dance (with real rods and bait,) a "Holiday Parade" with each girl costumed brilliantly as a different holiday, a sizzling version of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" with each dancing beauty also blowing a toy trumpet.

Most startling night spot act in months is that of the Virginia Melford trio (who will leave Lotus to open in New York's Casa Manana.) These uncanny performers roller skate on their hands, climax with a one-finger handstand on a ginger ale bottle.

Note. Wardell and Dade, one of America's best dance teams, who have recently been touring China, will soon appear at Lotus.

SWING INTO CLASSIC—When you hear Durward Bowersox and his violin in dance sessions at the Rainbow Room, you have only half of the picture. Durward is known as one of the best dance music violinists in the country, but he is also an excellent classic performer and plays at many concerts throughout the season.

GRADUATE MANNEQUIN—Anne King, who stages those tremendously successful style revues at Hour Glass, is a former mannequin, modeled fashions in New York and Paris for nine years.

GOTHAM GAUCHO—Marco Rosales, Latin-American singer at Cafe Caprice, may be the original "Latin from Manhattan." He was born in South America, but has lived in New York since he was 6 years old.

RUMOR DEPARTMENT—There's a whisper going round that the recent nosedive of the Heigh Ho Club may be retrieved by a re-opening with Head Waiter Leo prominent in the picture.

Another buzz is to the effect that $35,000 has been set aside for special construction and redecoration of a downtown roof garden.

Another undercover operative tells us that one of the smaller spots which has been coining money this winter, will open in new and much enlarged quarters next October.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 24.—Hollywood has broken out in an epidemic—a rash of re-makes. Producers dusted off old favorites like "Holiday," "Stella Dallas" and "The Awful Truth," remade them, and they're again taking prizes. At Paramount on the very stage where I worked in "Are Parents People?" 15 years ago (I'm still wondering about parents)—I was just a slip of a girl then—oh, yes? Well, on that stage I watched them begin the remake of "Beau Geste," with Gary Cooper as Beau, getting a reputed salary of $10,000 a week. And 15 years ago on the same lot he was satisfied with $75.

HEDDA HOPPER

Ray Milland and Robert Preston complete the threesome. Mary Brian's old part goes to newcomer Susan Hayward. Helen Broderick's son Broderick, who made an enormous hit last winter in "Of Mice and Men," plays the American cowboy. The original "Beau Geste" made stars of Bill Powell, Ronald Colman, Victor McLaglen, Neil Hamilton and Noah Beery. And it's still a great picture. I believe the present one will do as much for the new cast. It's fun to see Director Bill Wellman in harness again. A dynamo who's turned out some of our greatest. Will you ever forget "Wings" or "A Star Is Born?"

Next door at R. K. O. "A Bill of Divorcement" which put Katherine Hepburn on the map will star Anne Shirley. No girl, from Katherine Cornell down, has ever failed in that role. On the first day's shooting of the old picture, Katherine made up with the crowd but after they'd seen the rushes—wow! Did she get special attention. But isn't it a little soon to do that again?

At the same studio, after a few days' work on "They Made Her a Spy," Sally Eilers and Harry Joe Brown's 4-year-old son developed an interest in the facts of life. Said to his mother, "Daddy's working, you're working, now why should I work, too?"

Marriage has certainly taken Ronnie Colman out of the cloister and put him back in circulation. Why, he was actually seen dining in public at Dave Chasen's the other night with a party of six, which included Tim McCoy and Nora Lane. Benita Colman was wearing her gorgeous aquamarines, which Ronnie has been adding to. If he's not careful, Ronnie will find himself at previews, something he's never done before—not even his own pictures.

When Clark Gable bought the Raoul Walsh ranch, in the valley, he took none of the livestock, but Raoul took back Clark's acreage as part of the deal. Carole is busy as a bee directing the new finishings herself. It's a lovely place and almost a replica of the Walshs' town house, which is colonial. Understand Clark has paid Rhea $50,000 more than he intended before she'd take that sojourn to Las Vegas.

Those who have been chattering about the many weeks Hedy Lamarr's picture has been in production, seem to forget that the "Wizard of Oz" has been going five months and has two more to go.

Fred MacMurray's taking an awful kidding for the loud checks he's wearing in "Invitation to Happiness," but Bing Crosby is consumed with jealousy and trying to find out the name of his tailor.

Jane Withers will soon be on that Motion Picture Relief Fund airshow but not Shirley Temple, who's never broadcast. But I believe Twentieth Century will make the fund a handsome contribution, in lieu of her services.

At last, Bob Taylor saw New York. This, his third visit, he went as a small-town boy from Nebraska, rode the subway, walked down Broadway, took his constitutional around the reservoir in the park, said "Howdy" to the Statue of Liberty and wouldn't have a bodyguard or guide. Said nobody paid any attention to him, which he loved. Bob says the secret is—keep moving so fast they can't keep up with you, and never wear dark glasses.

Rather nice that the first person Nelson Eddy phoned to after his marriage was Jeannette MacDonald. Everyone's wishing them the greatest happiness, except my kid sister who's heart-broken. She's never seen him, but no one will ever love him more.

Jimmy Roosevelt didn't check his neighbors before signing that lease in Beverly Hills. All of them, except one, are strong Republicans—nay, they're rabid on the subject. Col. Halstead, who held an important military post in the Philippines, and L. F. Henry, Western head of National Biscuit. Wonder if there'll be any borrowing over the back fence?

Law Fraternity To Dance Saturday

A.I.B. Training Valuable Asset, Crowley Says

Banks Must Prepare Against Wide Swings, He Tells Bankers

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A complete dependence on ability and integrity of management makes invaluable the training that bank employes are offered by the American Institute of Banking, Chairman Leo T. Crowley, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, last night told members of Washington Chapter of the Institute. Speaking at a forum meeting of the chapter at Willard Hotel, Mr. Crowley informed its members that courses the institute makes available to supplement their daily experience in banks should add immeasurably to their understanding of the complex nature of our financial system.

A basic assumption that must underly any program to be formulated for banks, the speaker explained, is that the business cycle is a recurrent element in economic history that will not soon, if ever, disappear. Granting this, objectives of the program will not soon, if ever, disappear. Granting this, objectives of the program must be, first, to lessen the extreme swings of the business cycle—in other words, to impede inflationary and deflationary forces, and, second, to prepare financial institutions to withstand what swings will occur despite all human efforts at control.

Eliminating Trouble

This program, he reminded, naturally is aimed at elimination of the factors that caused banking troubles in the past, adding that many of our bank failures and millions of dollars of the losses the banking system has had to absorb can be traced, in part, to the accumulation of undesirable and worthless assets and to comparable types of mismanagement. A program designed to assure a sound future for American banking, he amplified, must also be directed at elimination of other causes of loss to depositors. Banks must be kept in sound condition and in capable hands, and good banks must be protected against destruction by those they serve.

"If losses are to be avoided," Mr. Crowley said, "earning assets must be chosen with care and with safety of depositors' funds as the primary consideration. It the responsibility for management of earning assets is to be met properly, the assets must not be forgotten immediately upon acquisition but must be serviced currently and checked continually for developments affecting the underlying security. If the carrying value of assets is to reflect their true value, as we believe it should, assets which for one reason or another have become worthless in whole or in part must be charged down to a fair value or written off the books entirely.

"Speculation, slip-shod accounting and managerial practices, and fictitious carrying values have no place in a bank and cannot be condoned by those who are charged with supervision of banks. Neither should they be condoned by those who know and who practice properly the business of banking. Experience has shown time after time the unfavorable and even destructive consequences upon the banking system as a whole of mismanagement and dishonesty in just one or a few instances."

FDIC A Factor

To protect the sound banks from uncalled for and unnecessary raids, however, a number of steps have been taken. Because the greatest danger to institutions of this type previously has been the fear that spread among their depositors at the slightest untoward development, creation of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was probably the greatest factor in re-establishing on what should be a permanent basis the confidence of people in the financial institutions that serve them.

While bank failures, he reminded, are no more likely to stop completely than are failures of other types of business enterprise, nevertheless adherence to proper managerial practice and the type of supervision for which the corporation stands will probably keep bank failures at a minimum, and in the few cases where banks do close, deposit insurance will eliminate losses to depositors and consequently remove the economic waste and aura of social menace that formerly attended collapse of financial institutions.

"The business slump of 1937," he cited, "furnished a real test of the validity of this claim. Coming as it did much more abruptly than the decline of the early 30s, the recent depression set a stage for popular reaction that was at once unprecedented and interesting to watch. What the watchers saw was unique in our financial history. In no part of the country and at no time during the decline was there the slightest flurry of distrust or panic on the part of bank depositors. Not a single insured bank found itself in difficulty because of the demands of depositors, and the banks had so greatly improved their own asset positions that there was even no appreciable increase in the rate of bank failures as a consequence of the shrinkage of bank assets which accompanied the slump."

Banks, as a whole, are in greatly improved condition, he concluded, and the ability, training and character of most bank managers are far superior to the average prevalent just a few years ago. Supervisors have modernized their outlook and combined their forces in a common effort to supervise financial institutions completely and intelligently. Depositors have confidence in their banks in a degree that has never before been possible.

Williams Heads Southeastern Loan

The Southeastern Loan Corporation of Roanoke, Va., an affiliate of Southeastern Industrial Bankers, of this city, will be headed again this year by C. R. Williams, who has again been elected to the presidency of the institution, it was announced yesterday by C. M. Eisele, president of the parent company. Other officers chosen by the Roanoke body, which is one of 13 affiliated with low-rate industrial loan companies operating in the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, are M. W. Bohrer, vice president; Lewis Eisele, vice president; C. M. Eisele, treasurer, and Mabel Smith, secretary.

December Sales Of Life Policies Set 7-Year-Peak

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 24.—Sales of ordinary life insurance (exclusive of group) for 1938 showed a decrease of 13 per cent when compared with 1937, according to figures just released by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, Hartford, Conn. December, however, experienced the largest volume of business sold in any one month since December, 1931.

During the first six months of the year, sales for each successive year-to-date period showed a steadily downward trend from 88 per cent in January to a low of 78 per cent at the end of June. A slight reversal occurred in the third quarter, bringing the ratio for the first nine months of the year to 79 per cent. In the fourth quarter, a sharp upward curve was experienced, culminating in December, which was 41 per cent ahead of December, 1937.

All but two States, North Dakota and Idaho, shared in the increase in December as compared with December a year ago. The percentage increase varied from 2 per cent in Nevada to 83 per cent in New York and Delaware. Seven States experienced more than a 50 per cent increase. Except for South Dakota, these States were concentrated on the Eastern seaboard, Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, and New York.

Retail Advertising 2.2% Under Year Ago

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Retail newspaper advertising in 79 major American cities was 2.2 per cent below the corresponding week of 1938 during the seven-day period ended January 14, Advertising Age reported today.

Short Covering Jumps Wheat Near Closing

Nervous Before Spurt Prices Rise a Cent Corn Also Higher

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—After fluctuating nervously most of the session, wheat prices suddenly spurted up more than a cent a bushel in the final hour today and closed with net gains ranging from ⅝ to 1 cent.

Short covering contributed to the velocity of the upturn, which wiped out early fractional losses and put quotations at times as much as 1⅜ cents above first hour lows. Nervousness over the foreign political situation and evidence of underlying support visible during early market action apparently disturbed dealers who had "short" positions and they rushed to cover when the advance got under way.

Additional purchases by British interests, some of which were for the government, included domestic and Canadian wheat although the amounts were small. Clearing weather in the southwest and action of the stock market in righting itself after a selling flurry around noon also were constructive factors.

Although reacting slightly from the highs, wheat closed ⅝-1 cent above Monday's finish. May and July 69⅞-¾; corn ¼-1 up, May 51⅝-¾, July 52¾-⅞; oats ⅛ higher; rye ½-⅝ higher; lard 7 to 12 higher.

Lead Price Cut To 4.75c Per Pound

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Sellers of lead for delivery in New York reduced the price 0.10 of a cent today to 4.75 cents a pound, returning the quotation to the December low.

Last spring the price went to 4.25 cents a pound but rallied to 5.10 during the summer industrial upturn and the September war crisis in Europe.

The Market

Covering and Buying Offset Selling Wave Ticker Falls Behind as Volume Increases Bond Market Weak in All Groups

New York, Jan. 24.—Nervous fluctuations, including a half-hour period of heavy selling which caused the ticker to be five minutes late in reporting transactions, featured a continuation of the bearish swing in the stock market today. Actually the list lost virtually no ground for the day, for there was a mixture of covering by shorts and buying by speculators who expected a technical rebound which nearly overcame the break of the third hour. Judged by the composite average, the net loss for the session was only 0.08 point compared with Monday's big decline of 2.09 points.

One Wall Street wag, when asked what brought the market back in the afternoon, replied "Frank Buck."

There were other more plausible explanations, however. At the low point in the third hour the list had taken care of a large amount of the more nervous selling. Temporarily, at least, the situation had become oversold. When the ticker fell behind and stock was offered in increased volume, it had the appearance of a selling climax. This encouraged the bargain hunters who are quick to scalp a few points on any technical move, and it also encouraged profit taking by the short interest.

That the current wave of liquidation had its inception abroad appears to be confirmed by checks which bankers have been making. Such selling has been growing in amount in the last few days and it reached major proportions Monday. The bulk of it originated in London, but of course part of the London business may have represented selling orders from other centers which passed through London houses. Amsterdam has been a spot of particular nervousness. This has arisen because of the strained relations which have emerged between Holland and Germany, as reflected in the German press.

Amsterdam Weak

The Amsterdam market has suffered more than any of the other European markets in the recent liquidation, and also more than our own, while the weakness of the guilder has featured foreign exchange dealings. Continental markets firmed slightly today but the guilder lost another 6½ points.

The major part of Wall Street's attention naturally has been centered on the foreign scene, with few brave enough to make predictions. Brokers report that while this uncertainty exists, the larger traders and investors are satisfied to sit by with their long holdings reduced. Presumably they would step back in on any improvement in the foreign situation but they do not see it yet. In the meantime the market is thin and a moderate amount of selling is sufficient to bring sharp declines.

Trading was heavy again today, amounting to 1,699,700 shares, with the heaviest trading starting just a few minutes before noon. On the recovery in the fourth hour trading dried up but the final hour was better.

I. C. C. Angle

On the domestic scene, there was considerable disappointment among railroad investors, as well as in some Congressional quarters, at the naming of Representative Thomas R. Amlie, defeated Progressive of Wisconsin, to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Here is another Presidential appointment in which Mr. Roosevelt appears to have reached far out on the left, and when he does that, what good is there in talking about a rapprochement between business and the White House? Mr. Amlie, as far as can be learned, is lacking in the qualifications which would fit a man for the technical duties of an I. C. C. commissioner. When appointments are made on a political rather than a business basis, the President does much to undo the work of his friends who have been saying that he is now concentrating on recovery rather than reform.

Bonds Yield to Pressure

Listed bonds continued to drop swiftly today with little sign of the recovery tendency apparent that finally set the share market on a more even keel. United States Treasury issues lost goodly fractions, and best corporate bonds also lost some ground. In the speculative groups losses ranged to 3 points, with domestic and foreign issues alike affected. The German group led the Europeans to lower levels. Turnover in all bonds was $8,040,000.

Long-term United States Treasury issues receded 2-32 to 11-32 point, and found their level about ¼ to ½ point under recent highs. Heavy business was done over the counter, although turnover on the formal board was small. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations eased, partly on the news that agency financing will be resumed with $100,000,000 of guaranteed housing notes. Best grade corporate investments were down small fractions.

Speculative railroad bonds were soft as a group, and there were few exceptions to the trend. Declines in the more active issues ranged from fractions to three points and more. Default rails joined the movement, even though quotations already were deeply depressed.

Bankers Plan To Spur Flow Of New Capital

Jean C. Witter, I. B. A. President, Sets Forth Program at Baltimore

Baltimore, Jan. 24.—Investment bankers inaugurated here today a program aimed at reopening the capital markets, so that investment funds will flow more freely to industry, financing its rehabilitation, creating jobs and bringing recovery. Jean C. Witter, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, and himself a general partner in the Pacific Coast investment banking firm of Jean Witter & Co., announced that as the organization's primary objective. Real recovery will come when industrial concerns build and buy new production facilities, he said, because that not only means there are new jobs in their own plants but also work for the men who make machinery and build factories. "And, of course, the core of depression unemployment is in these so-called 'capital' or 'producers goods' industries," he added.

Speaking at the Hotel Belvedere at a luncheon meeting of the Southeastern group of the association he said that the first step was to convince people that investment bankers are intensely in earnest. He went on to say that "this country cannot continue indefinitely to satisfy its consumptive needs unless we get the operations started that make it possible to maintain the level of production and the standard of living of the country."

Sales Make Jobs

"It is the job of investment banking to finance that reconstruction of our national factory, Mr. Witter said. "The slogan, 'Sales mean jobs,'" he said, "might be paraphrased by the investment bankers to say 'Sales of bonds and stocks make new jobs.'

"It takes the savings of a tremendous number of people to supply capital to trade and industry in the amounts that modern big-scale operations require," he emphasized. "Think a minute about how our great factories are financed. Who puts up the money? For 12 years prior to the depression there was an average annual sum of $3,750,000,000 that flowed from the individual who had saved it, through investment banking, into the purchase of newly issued bonds and stocks of business corporations. Those were strictly new capital funds for American industry and went to build buildings, to buy machinery and equipment. That is the way jobs are made in the United States.

"It takes lots of investors to buy $3,750,000,000 worth of new securities annually. But for 12 years to 1930 American investors did it. Consequently there were millions of new jobs. Since 1930, however, there has been a scant $700,000,000 flowing to industry annually through investment in new securities. There has been a parallel deficiency of new jobs in industry."

Rockefeller Scion Wins Key Award For Civic Service

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Winthrop Rockefeller, now 26, who "started at the bottom" in the oil business, will go to work tomorrow for the corporation founded by his grandfather, the late John D. Rockefeller. Presenting the "key award" of the Young Men's Board of Trade of New York to young Rockefeller today, the board's president, Richard Kulze, said, "I am informed that he will enter upon a new job tomorrow in the foreign trade department of the Socony-Vaccum Oil Co."

Rockefeller left Yale in 1934 to work for the Humble Oil & Refining Co. For 2½ years he worked in every department of the company, including in his curriculum jobs as "roustabout" on the maintenance gang and "roughneck" in the drilling department.

Then, late in 1936, he entered the Chase National Bank on a student basis, from which he resigned January 15, 1938, to become vice chairman of the Greater New York Fund, an organized charity. His work for the fund resulted in today's award, given for the most "outstanding civic service" performed by a man under 36 during the year.

Cotton Firm; March at 8.43

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Although still apprehensive of unfavorable developments in Europe, the cotton market was on firmer ground today, after a selling movement yesterday. Closing prices for futures were up 1 to 3 points and 3 to 5 points above the day's lows, recorded after the stock market suffered another break around midday.

Cottonseed Oil

The cottonseed oil market caught its balance after an early selling flurry today to close 2 points net higher to as much lower. Tempting buyers was a stronger market for lard in the West. Hedging was offset by a fairly broad covering movement. Sales totaled 296 lots.

March closed, 6.97; May, 7.09@7.07; July, 7.17@7.16; September, 7.22. Crude oil sold at 5¾ in the Southeast and Valley; Texas was quoted at 5½@5¾.

Union Bag Workers Take 30,203 Shares

New York, Jan. 24.—Employes of Union Bag & Paper Corporation have subscribed to 30,203 shares, or approximately 15 per cent of the 210,455 new shares of capital stock of the company now being offered to stockholders, it was stated today by Alexander Calder, president.

Subscription rights for employes expired January 21, and are subject to the availability of stock for delivery after exercise by stockholders of rights to subscribe under warrants mailed on January 21.

B. & O. Carloadings

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Howard University School of Music presents The Russian Trio (Nina Mesirov-Minchin, piano; Herman Felber, violin; Ennio Bolognini, violoncello) Tuesday night in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel. Program: Trio No. 4, Op. 11 (Beethoven), Trio Elegiaque, Op. 9 (Rakhmaninov), Trio No. 2, Op. 76 (Turina).

An enjoyable program of pianoforte trios was played last evening by Nina Mesirov-Minchin, Herman Felber and Ennio Bolognini at the fourth concert in the current series sponsored by Howard University school of music. In timing, dynamic adjustments and interpretative phrasing the performers showed commendable consentience. Because of its superior weight of tone, the piano is always the dominant instrument in a trio with strings, and the principal problem is to keep it in balance with its companions.

The program began with Beethoven's Opus 11, a work of his youth before he had emancipated himself from formal conventions. There is scarcely a measure in it that expresses his personality, and save for a few idiomatic passages it might easily pass as the utterance of Haydn. At the time he was feeling his way toward his characteristic manner of expression.

Also a youthful composition is Rakhmaninov's Trio Elegiaque written in 1893 when he was 20 years old. That year he had been deeply shocked by the sudden death of Chaikovski, who had been his friendly mentor. Wishing to express his sorrow in music, he remembered that Chaikovski had composed a piano-forte trio in memory of Nikolai Rubinstein, and he naively decided to do the same thing. His trio, however, does not measure up to that of his master.

For one thing, it is too long, and for another, its thematic material is too exiguous. The mood of mourning is most adequately expressed in the first movement, the finest writing is contained in the "Quasi Variazione," which has some lovely lyrical ideas deftly handled, while the last movement indulges in an angry grief and tumultuous plangencies.

The most interesting and rewarding work on the program was the second trio by Joaquin Turina, the Spanish composer now in his fifty-sixth year. Nearly all the music of Turina which has reached this country is colored with Iberian rhythms and idioms, but this trio is absolute music quite free from national traits. Now and then one hears the suggestion of a bolero in the rhythm, but this is not sustained by local color. In the harmonic texture one notes the influence of Debussy, and if one is looking for a "school" to which to relate it, one would say that it is more French than Spanish. The music has intense vitality and atmospheric charm.

Not me. I like to hear him
You like to hear him?
Yeah—sounds just like a fence cat I used to hear when I was a boy
Makes me think it's Saturday mornin' and I'm just wakin' up to realize I don't have to go to school
Funny thing what sounds can do to you. I wish I could influence you like that cat

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Ursula Bloom has a keen dislike for bridge and for hostesses who expect their guests to play while on a week-end. She voices her disapproval in "The Newcastle Chronicle," saying:

"Has it ever struck you, personally, how cruel are the bridge fiends? You go to stay for a week-end with people you do not know very well.

"'Of course, you play bridge?' they say, and you answer blushingly that you do not. 'We will teach you,' they reply, and, although you murmur all sorts of excuses the next half hour sees you sitting down with three patient people, each of whom tells you something different.

"Eventually, they say that you are a promising pupil; that it isn't much fun playing for love, and will you mind if they have very small points? You can't say no. The rest of the evening is misery.

"Not only are you made to play a game that you loathe but you are made to pay for it. And pay for it you do!"

It may be that unwilling bridge players suffer, but so do their partners, who also must share the loss. Countless points are squandered by the neophyte of which he has no comprehension, and for his partner to attempt to explain would be sheer waste of breath. Therefore, however unpleasant Miss Bloom may think it is to play cards with bridge fiends, it is even more painful for bridge fiends to struggle along with a dub. Such mismatching reflects upon the hostess, who should know her guests a little better.

Take today's hand as an example. It would be impossible for North to tell his partner that he should not have finessed the heart jack at his contract of four spades, a play which lost the hand, for South, who has just learned how to finess, will argue, "but West bid hearts didn't he? He should have the queen." It would be futile for North to point out that regardless of the bidding South should make an end-play to make sure of his contract. Thus luck is blamed for a loss of points that skill could have overcome.

As the hand was played by our maladroit beginner, West cashed two club tricks, and led a trump. Declarer won, took a second round to exhaust the opponents in the suit, and played the ace of hearts. He entered his hand with a trump, led a heart and finessed the jack which lost to East's lone queen. When later the diamond finesses also lost, South bewailed his bad luck, crying, "But how could I tell East had only the queen and one heart, West bid the suit?"

North, who was a wise as well as skillful player, uttered some soothing response, and the matter was forgotten. However his eagle eye did not miss the correct play on the hand. After taking two rounds of trumps, South should play the ace, king and jack of hearts. In this case, he would make his contract because the heart queen would fall, but, assuming the queen lay protected in the West hand, the play of the jack would throw West in the lead, who would then be forced to play from his king of diamonds, giving South two tricks in that suit.

The heart finesses should not be attempten.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

TODAY'S top spot: A principal informational representative wanted by the wage-hour division and for whom the Government will pay $5,600 a year. It is a Federal press job and the cynical will say that somebody already in wage-hour press will get it. But the Civil Service Commission scouts such a low thought with the rejoinder that incumbents of wage-hour press jobs will have to demonstrate their fitness along with everybody else who wants to compete. Anyhow, the top age limit is 60 years, which should be gratifying to Senator W. Warren Barbour, Republican, of New Jersey, who this week introduced a bill (fulfilling a campaign pledge) which would prohibit discrimination against elderly people who seek Federal jobs. Senator Barbour's office was reminded that there seems to be little or no discrimination against the elderly as far as the Civil Service Commission is concerned. But when it comes to giving them administrative raises or promotions, the story is something else again.

SECRETARY Morgenthau yesterday had to tell the public something the Federal Diary said some time ago, viz: that the Jefferson nickel is worth only 5 cents. From the start, people began to hoard them, in the mistaken belief that some rarity attached to the coin. This probably arose from the notion that the coins wouldn't be minted for long. And this notion probably sprang from the fact that in the early stages, the designer of the coin was asked to make certain revisions in design. The conclusion was—and it must have persisted—that the mint officials were dissatisfied with the coin. Actually, they are tremendously pleased with it. In any event, approximately 32,000,000 Jefferson nickels have come from the mints to date. The initial shipment of 11,000,000 passed through the Federal Reserve banks on November 16, and letters by the hundreds poured into the Treasury, inquiring whether the coin with Mr. Jefferson's big house on the back would continue. Then came the publicized word that the coin would be taken off the market. Mint officials speak of it in a resigned sort of way now. "They've even complained to us that the nickel is an off-size and won't fit into coin boxes. And it is identical with other nickels in alloy, size, everything," they say.

IN THE mails comes the weekly list of selected Government publications, cataloging the pamphlets and booklets on such diverse subjects as Alaska, ant, beans, education, plumbing, securities, sugar beets and lambs. And today the interdepartmental committee, created by executive order, is scheduled to meet again to bring out facts on what publications are saleable, how publications can be made more saleable and how the whole business can be generally systematized. The business, as it now is, looks pretty good. The GPO has approximately 65,000 different publications for sale, last month did a $100,000 business, and, altogether, disposes of some 10,000,000 publications a year. The Postoffice Department, of course, chronically franked, material its delivery men haul on their shoulders and that is an aspect of the interdepartmental committee's problem—to determine just what is useful matter and to take out the slack. The GPO's comment is that not enough publications are sold. They want to turn on the sales heat.

THOUSANDS of Federal bridge players are showing an interest in The Washington Post city-wide Valentine Day benefit that is aimed at bringing nev. health to underprivileged children of all races and creeds. Individuals by attending the Federal or Washington Bridge League, or other blood and serum bank Valentine bridge parties held through Washington the night of February 14 can be sure of contributing to the endeavor. The Federal Bridge League invites you to the parties to be held the fourteenth at the Shoreham and Wardman Park.

MRS. Lois E. Newell, receiving clerk, Collections Subdivision, Finance Service, Veterans' Administration, retires today after 25 years of Government service. She was appointed in 1918 to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, which was then under Treasury but later became the Veterans' Bureau and subsequently the Veterans' Administration. J. C. Dale, Chief, Premium Accounts and Collections Division, will present a travelling bag to Mrs. Newell on behalf of her associates. Her plan: To do some leisurely traveling and visiting among friends.

JOB: Associate aeronautical inspector, $3,500; assistant aeronautical inspector, $3,200; Civil Aeronautics Authority. Civil service handles the jobs.

Bob Burns Says—

My Uncle Frowsy lives in a rural county that's got more of his relations per square mile than it has potaters. One time he up an' ran fer the office of County School Superintendent, tellin' the voters if he got elected, he'd give every one of his relatives a job! Brother, did them relatives get busy! He's not only in office today; he's there fer life! An', jes' last week I got a surprise letter from him. He said: "Dear Bob—You're the only relation that ain't on the county pay roll, an' I been sufferin' from a guilty conscience. Can't I make you third assistant dog catcher or somethin', jes' to keep my relativity record one hundred per cent?" I wrote back: "Sorry, Uncle, but my pitcher an' radio contracts won't permit my takin' any more jobs . . . but please hold that third assistant dog catcher's job open. If they don't treat me right here in Hollywood, I kin always hold your offer over their heads!"

Bedtime Story

Reddy Dines Well

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Who dines well gets a change of view
And sees the world in rosy hue.

Reddy Fox was not getting enough to eat, yet at the same time he was getting enough. It was the same way with Mrs. Reddy. That doesn't make sense, does it? Well it was like this: They were getting enough to keep them alive and active, but they were not getting enough for them often to feel that they had had all they wanted. It seemed to them that they always were hungry; that they went to sleep hungry and awoke hungry.

To make it all the harder for Reddy and Mrs. Reddy some one wanted their fur coats. Of course they didn't know that it was their coats that were wanted, but they did know some one wanted them and for no good purpose from their point of view. You see they had discovered that traps, those dreadful steel traps with cruel jaws, were being cunningly set especially for them. So now they must ever be watchful of where they stepped. While they hunted to catch others they must all the time be watchful that they were not themselves caught.

The trapper had discovered that these were no careless or heedless foxes who had moved into his neighborhood and he made use of all his knowledge of foxes and their ways that he might outwit them. He was never careless. He never left any trace of the man smell on or around those traps he hid so cleverly. You or I would never have suspected those traps had we happened where they were set, but somehow Reddy and Mrs. Reddy did. It seemed that there was no trick that trappers know that Reddy and Mrs. Reddy did not also know.

Now all this time they had carefully avoided the barnyards and henyards of the neighboring farms that their presence in the neighborhood might not be suspected. Now it was different. They knew that the trapper knew that they were there. They knew just which farm he lived on, for unseen by him they had watched him come and go. It was one of two farms where the hens were not kept shut up during the night.

Early one morning Reddy was over near that farm. He was very hungry for the results of his night's hunting had been poor. As he peered from a thicket on the edge of the woods he saw that trapper starting out to make the rounds of his traps. Reddy watched until the trapper had disappeared. Reddy looked over toward the farm. He could see hens moving about in the henyard. His mouth watered. He saw a hen go through the open gate into the dooryard. Others followed. Reddy's eyes gleamed and his mouth watered more. Reddy moved quickly. There was no longer any reason for keeping away from this particular farm. Keeping as much under cover as he could he approached that henyard.

He heard the door of the farmhouse open. The trapper's wife threw out some scraps to the hens. They ran from all directions to pick them up. The door closed. Reddy made a dash into the midst of those hens. Without stopping he seized one by the neck and was around the corner of the barn with it before the mistress of the house, hurrying to the door in response to the outcry of the frightened hens, saw him. There behind the barn of the trapper who was seeking him, Reddy ate the best meal he had had for weeks.

Spanish Fight Is 'Our War,' Says Rep. Geyer

1,000 Vote to Lift Embargo, Send Plea To White House

Representative Lee Geyer, of California, said last night American self-preservation demands immediate lifting of the Spanish embargo.

His plea, in a mass meeting of more than 1,000 at the Masonic Temple, sponsored by the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy, was supported by Lady Dorothea Layton, wife of the publisher of the London New Chronicle; Miss Ruby Rich, chairman of the Australian Women's Committee for the International Peace Campaign; Dr. David Efron, professor of Latin-American culture at Sarah Lawrence College, and Elmer E. Rogers, associate editor of Scottish Rite publications.

The group adopted a resolution asking the embargo be lifted without delay, and citing the Gallup poll as indication that a majority of Americans favor this policy. Copies were ordered sent to the President, the House and Senate committees on foreign affairs, and Secretary of State Hull.

"Our War," He Says

Representative Geyer said a victory by the Spanish insurgents would turn the Atlantic Ocean into a "Fascist controlled highway to the Western Hemisphere."

Describing Spain as the first line of American defense, Geyer said "whether we like it or not the war in Spain has become our war."

Warning the "Great Britain of Neville Chamberlain cannot be trusted to hold the Atlantic for democracy," Geyer said lifting the embargo might still "tip the scales against aggression and war, tip them for democracy, national safety and peace."

British Revolt Reported

Lady Layton, executive committee member of the League of Nations Union, the Women's Peace Crusade, and of Spanish relief organizations, said a tremendous feeling of revolt was growing in England against the policy that "my government should stand by while Germany and Italy continue their pressure on the plucky Spanish people."

Miss Rich said Australians see the fight for democracy in Spain as their own fight, but she pointed out the Australian government is still linked by the ties of empire to the policies of the government in England.

Dr. Efron described Franco as "traitor No. 1 of the twentieth century," and said a victory by his forces would be the signal for an intensive drive to dominate Latin America

Rogers said it was not too late to lift the embargo even when "the fascists are smashing at the gates of Madrid," for, he declared, the loyalists could still win if they could buy arms in the same quantity Franco obtains them from Germany and Italy.

Among the speakers at the rally of the Washington Committee to lift the embargo against Republican Spain last night at the Masonic Temple were Representative Lee Geyer (left), of California; Ruby Rich, of Australia, chairman of the Australian Women's Committee for the International Peace Campaign, and Dorothea Layton, of the English League of Nations Union

Dies Charges Justice Agents Are Making Inquiry About Him

Tells Council of Patriotic Organizations Department Should Spend Its Money On Investigating Subversive Activities

Representative Dies (Democrat) of Texas, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, yesterday charged he had heard Department of Justice agents were investigating him and witnesses who appeared before his committee.

Dies made his charge in a broadcast address before 200 delegates to the American Coalition of Patriotic Societies, which held its ninth annual conference at the Carlton Hotel.

Earlier, delegates indorsed the move to impeach Secretary of Labor Perkins and passed resolutions calling for retention of the Spanish arms embargo, building of defense forces capable of protecting the Western Hemisphere, appropriation of $150,000 by Congress to continue the Dies committee, reduction of immigration quotas by 90 per cent, registration of all aliens, deportation of aliens on relief, a ban on entry of refugees and expressing opposition to granting of "dictatorial powers" to the President in war or peace.

Senator Reynolds Speaks

Other parley speakers were Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina; Walter Steele, editor of the National Republic, and Merwin K. Hart, president of the New York State Economic Council.

Maintaining he had no objections to the fullest investigation of himself or the witnesses, Dies said that if the reports were true, "I can only say that we are facing a serious situation when, instead of investigating subversive activities, the Department of Justice spends its time and the taxpayers' money investigating a Congressional committee."

He warned against the Communists' "Trojan horse policy of boring from within," and asserted that the "modern liberal" and the Communist both are advocating "erection of an all-powerful state which will greedily swallow up the rights of the individual."

Hits Saposs Again

Dies denounced liberals who would abandon the principles of Jefferson for those of Toryism and averred that Lenin, Mussolini and Hitler had all posed as champions of liberalism. He attributed communistic interests to David Saposs, National Labor Relations Board chief economist, and Paul Sifton, assistant wage and hour administrator.

Reynolds, a member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, insisted that the United States has severed diplomatic relations with Germany over the treatment of minorities and, to be consistent, should also drop off relations with Mexico, Spain, Japan, Russia and Italy.

"Instead of meddling in the business of other nations," he said, "I think we should keep to our own knitting."

Parley Defends Private Rail Ownership

Asks Congress for U. S. Financial Aid; Relief From Burdens

Making a determined stand in defense of private ownership and operation of railroads, the National Transportation Conference yesterday made public concrete proposals for improving the financial position of the railroads, at the conclusion of a two-day meeting in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

The proposals, involving rate-making, Federal financial aid, consolidation and reorganization of the railroads and relief from certain burdens and restrictions, will be submitted immediately to Senate and House committees now considering railroad legislation.

The conference, called by the chamber last September, represented a cross-section of business interests, including shippers and investors as well as operators or railroad, and water carriers. In a general declaration of policy it urged that the Interstate Commerce Commission be obliged to consider the financial condition of railroads in rate-making. The Hoch-Smith resolution and Congressional rate-making in general were opposed by unanimous resolution.

Federal aid was sought in the form of exemption from income and undistributed profits taxes under special conditions, rather than through Government loans. The repeal of the present rigid regulations governing consolidation of railroads was urged.

Relief was sought from the burdens of the land-grant statutes, the expense of grade-crossing elimination, the competition of Federal barge lines, and restrictive measures such as train-length limit, excess-crew laws, 6-hour days, etc.
